'Big Inch' Oil Line to East Completed

ICKES SEES RELEASE OF TANK CARS

Predicts Flexible Transport But Midwest Faces Sharper Gasoline Rationing.

'STALLING' CHARGED

New Jersey Congressman Hits Enforcement Action, Worse Shortage Expected.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Welding of the last joint in the "big inch" oil pipeline at Phoenixville, Pa., today symbolizes Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes' promise to recommend within 30-to-60 days a larger share of the available gasoline for the east.

Ickes, in a statement Saturday night, said completion of the "big inch" would make it possible to release tank cars and provide "transportation flexibility." He plans to recommend an equalized rationing program, under which easterners would get a little more gasoline and midwest and southwest states less.

The mild degree of optimism aroused by Ickes' statement was echoed by the petroleum industry war council which endorsed Ickes' proposal.

Not so enthusiastic was the group of eastern congressmen headed by Rep. Fred A. Hartley, jr., R., N. J., who have been agitating for action to relieve eastern shortages.

"We begin to see signs that our program for the relief of the shortage is being considered," Hartley said, but then accused Ickes of "stalling."

Hartley also accused officials enforcing the ban on pleasure driving of being "a lot of gestapo agents"—a charge supported by the American Automobile association which called the OPA's enforcement program a "new and dangerous course."

AAA President Thomas P. Henry filed a statement with Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown saying that OPA's enforcement program opens the way to "widespread abuses" they make possible the harassment of motorists on an unprecedented scale; they give local police and local ration boards summary power over every out-of-state and out-of-town motorist.

2 More From Richland Die In War Zone

Bataan Prisoner Dies In Camp; Gunner On Flying Fortress Killed.

The names of two more Richland county soldiers today were added to the list of dead in World War II.

Previously reported a prisoner of the Japanese, Pvt. John E. Robinette, son of Mrs. Adeline Robinette, Walker lake road, member of a tank battalion that took part in the historic defense of Bataan, was reported to have died in an enemy prison camp in the Philippines, the war department said today.

A delayed press dispatch from Sicily reported that Sgt. Carson E. Logan, son of Mrs. J. F. Logan of Lexington, had been killed in action over the Mediterranean island.

The death of Logan, waist gunner aboard a flying fortress, was disclosed by two members of the crew who bailed out of the flaming ship after it had been disabled by enemy gunfire.

They were captured by Italians and committed to a hospital in Ragusa where American invasion soldiers found them when they swarmed over the island.

Sgt. Logan the co-pilot, the ball-turret gunner and the other waist gunner, the wounded crew members said, were killed when their formation was attack by 100 enemy fighters following an Allied raid July 5 on Comiso airfield. Their deaths, however, have not been officially confirmed by the war department.

The crew members, the dispatch said, knocked down 11 of the enemy planes before the pilot gave the word to abandon ship.

Sgt. Logan was inducted Sept. 22, 1942. He graduated from the U. S. army air force flexible gunnery school at Tyndall field, Fla., in December and was sent to North Africa in February.

His mother said today that she had received six letters from him last week. It was not known when they were dispatched.

Pvt. Robinette was one of a group of eight Mansfielders taken prisoner by the Japanese when the Philippines fell to the enemy more than a year ago.

His mother received word several weeks ago that he was held in a prison camp in the Philippines.

Robinette was inducted in January 1941. He went to the far east with U. S. forces that arrived on the island on Thanksgiving day 1941, only two weeks before the

How Allied Forces Move Inland on Sicily

Paving the way for the British Eighth army now reported to be on the outskirts of the important Sicilian port of Catania, American Flying Fortresses of the Northwest African air forces gave the city a heavy aerial pounding. 13,000,000 TO FILE RETURNS IN SEPTEMBER

Many Will Make Payments In Addition To Weekly Withholding Tax.

INCOME ESTIMATES DUE

Officials Hope To Have New Forms In Mail By September First.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Internal revenue officials estimated today that about 13,000,000 taxpayers will have to file returns Sept. 15 and in many cases make a quarterly income tax payment despite the new 20 per cent withholding tax on wages and salaries.

But for most of these 13,000,000 the Sept. 15 payments won't be nearly so large as previous quarterly installments. The payments will amount to roughly the difference between one-fourth of the tax liability on 1943 income and the amount collected through the withholding tax in July, August and September.

The whole job of getting the pay-as-you-go tax plan into operation is the greatest administrative task the government has undertaken, revenue bureau officials said.

As part of that job the bureau is now preparing forms on which the 13,000,000 will have to file on Sept. 15 declarations of 1943's estimated income. These forms will be mailed by Sept. 1 officials hope—to all of the 38,000,000 persons on the income tax rolls. It will be up to the individual to determine whether he must file an estimate and make a payment Sept. 15.

The Sept. 15 estimates of 1943 income are required by law from single persons receiving more than $2700 and married persons receiving more than $3500 a year from wages and salaries subject to the withholding tax and from all persons who have income of $100 a year or more from sources not subject to withholding. Farmers, however, do not need to file their estimates until Dec. 15.

The withholding tax is sufficient to pay only the normal income tax.

U. S., Canadians Score Gains In Central Sicily

Carefully Trained Bombardiers Hit Railway Yards In Italian Capital As Follow-up Of Ultimatum; 35,000 Prisoners Taken.

BULLETIN
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—(AP)—An all-American force of Flying Fortresses, Liberators, Mitchells and Marauders carried out the war's first bombing of Rome, it was disclosed tonight.

BULLETIN
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—(AP)—Almost incredible first hand reports of broken morale among Italians in Sicily poured in at Allied headquarters today. Italian troops were said to be surrendering in organized units.

(By Associated Press)

Striking home a grim ultimatum for surrender, Allied Bombers smashed military targets in Rome by daylight today in a daring, significant raid, and in Sicily American troops forging deep inland captured the big communications center of Caltanissetta.

Caltanissetta lies almost halfway across the middle section of the crumbling "fortress island" and only eight miles southwest of Enna, defense key of central Sicily.

Canadian troops seized Piazza Armerina, 15 miles east of Caltanissetta to throw a pincers at Enna, and British forces hammered their way to within three miles of Catania.

The bag of prisoners captured in nine days fighting totals more than 35,000, Allied headquarters added.

Carefully-instructed Allied bombardiers rained explosives upon the railway yards in Rome that had poured German troops to Sicily, and hit war industries in the city's outskirts. Leaflets were dropped beforehand to discount the anticipated Axis clamor that religious shrines in the Eternal City were being desecrated.

Caltanissetta, center of a network of roads and railroads, was seized by American troops who moved up after smashing a German counter-attack to the south near Barrafranca. Its capture threatened to split Axis defenses.

Allied advances continued on all sectors, a communique declared, and the British Eighth army still was driving up the east coast upon Catania despite "strong opposition." Canadians also pushed forward in the central sector.

In a brilliant air victory, U. S. Lightning fighters punched upon 15 big German Junkers-52 transports and sent every one of them into the Tyrrhennian sea. Other Allied planes hit airfields in Italy and bombed Catania.

The inexorable Allied advance and the attack upon the Italian capital especially spotlighted clearly the disaster impending for Italy.

The raid meant war in earnest to the Italians, who long have regarded Rome as a bomb refuge, and backed up the Allied demand of last week that Italians quit this war. It hinted strongly at coming invasion of the Italian mainland.

The surprised Italians announced some bombs had been dropped, and that damage was being investigated.

In Sicily the great tentacles of Allied invasion had clutched up one-third of that biggest of Medi-

Action Expected From Church Plea For Farm Labor

Church-going Mansfielders yesterday heard the plea of Richland county farmers for help in harvesting their crops.

In five-minute talks five members of the Chamber of Commerce emergency farm labor committee presented the situation of the farmers in the county who without help from city workers will not be able to get their crops in from the fields.

Though the results of the speakers' efforts in behalf of the farmers have not yet been tabulated, one of the group indicated today that there was "a definite interest in the plea."

George Ganyard, county extension agent through whose office the emergency farm labor program is being carried on, said today he has requests from three farmers for immediate help this week in haying, harvesting and corn weeding.

These farmers are Charles

Ernie Pyle Now Writing From Sicily

On the way to Sicily Ernie Pyle intended to write for several days about the way the Navy handled its part of the invasion plan. But when Ernie saw Sicily he just couldn't resist going ashore to see how the soldiers were getting along. How they were getting along, what Sicily looked like and how the inhabitants behaved is described by Ernie on today's editorial page.

LEADER SLAIN

Pendergast Foe Shot By Guard on Kansas City Street.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. —(INS)— A guard at the Aircraft Accessories corporation in Kansas City, Kas., was questioned today in the fatal shooting of Louis G. Lower, nationally known leader in youth organizations and a member of the Republican group that smashed the Pendergast political machine.

Lower was shot yesterday, according to witnesses, by a man who had been posing as a traffic officer at the union station plaza, and reprimanding motorists when Lower stopped for a red light.

The man, identified as Clyde Souders, 49, a guard at the Aircraft Accessories plant, assertedly ordered Lower to the curb and then shot him when Lower demanded to see his credentials. Lower died within a few minutes from a bullet wound in his chest.

Members of the Chamber of Commerce legislative committee were to meet this afternoon with Mayor W. J. Locke and City Auditor Paul Kelley in the Farmers Bank building to outline a plan of financing the city's purchase of 1,000 acres of land for the proposed Mansfiel dairport expansion project.

As chairman of the legislative committee, former Common Pleas Judge C. H. "When we point out to city officials how the purchase can be financed, it will be up to city council to set the program in motion by authorizing the expenditure and asking for court authority for the transfers," Huston said.

FRANTIC: Fascist Secretary Appeals To Italians To Resist

(By Associated Press)

BERN—Declaring that Italy would be dismembered, her people enslaved and her treasures looted if she yielded, Carlo Scorza, new secretary of the Fascist party, broadcast from Rome last night a frantic appeal for last-ditch resistance to the Allies.

The speech obviously a reply to the Roosevelt-Churchill unconditional surrender demand which last week was conveyed to the Italian people by radio and leaflets dropped from planes, acknowledged, however, that the plight of Italy is desperate.

Italy, Scorza said is "as never before in mortal danger," picturing her as "a little group of men" standing out against the two richest powers in the world who, he asserted are 'most avid to gorge and wishing to destroy her territorial and political unity and abolish her rights."

"The Italians know that this is a war of continents," he said. "The Italians know that this is a war of race, with the British and Americans as the vanguards of the inferior hordes."

Although he made no direct reference to the Allied ultimatum he held that only through continued resistance could the Italian nation survive. Recounting the nation's gains under 23 years of Fascist rule he painted a dark picture of the fate in store for Italy in surrender.

"Resist! Resist! Resist!" he exhorted. "If the enemy should be

SURPRISE: Yanks Strike At Dawn To Capture Caltigirone

By CLARK LEE
(INS Staff Correspondent)

WITH U. S. FORCES ON THE CALTIGIRONE FRONT, Sicily, July 16—(Delayed)—Civilians who had practically nothing to eat themselves offered us food and cheered us lustily today as we entered Caltigirone after driving enemy forces out in a surprise attack at dawn.

During the early morning assault, a small American unit's light artillery at point blank range knocked out five Nazi tanks, two armored cars and a German plane in one of the most unusual and dramatic fights of this campaign.

The Americans took up a precarious position overlooking Caltigirone at 4 a. m., undected by the enemy, after a night-long march from the Biscari airport. En route they had encountered a patrol of 30 enemy troops, led by German officers, and killed or captured them all before they could sound a warning.

When Lieut. Col. Clarence B. Cochran of Okema, Okla., learned the Americans had taken up their position squarely in the middle of a German tank park and munitions dump, he immediately ordered guns brought up and posted riflemen behind a stone wall only 30 yards from a farmhouse in which the Germans had set up their headquarters.

Before the enemy was aware of the enemy's presence, Lieut. Runford and a group of soldiers literally carried a .57mm gun weighing 900 pounds to a position across the road from the farm house.

Just before dawn Lieut. Walter A. Ufer, crouching in the field grass, spotted a German Mark IV tank on a slope only 200 yards from Wilson's gun. Wilson fired.

Week Of 'Army Life' Hardens City's State Guard Company

Members of Company F, Ohio State guard, returned to civilian life today, bronzed and hardened from a week of "army life."

The unit returned yesterday from Camp Zaleski in southern Ohio where it had participated the past week in regimental maneuvers.

Warriors of the khaki-clad "home-front" detachment were glad to get back—it was a tough going the first few days for these civilian workers — but there wasn't a one among them who didn't wish that it could have lasted longer.

"We just got the kinks out and were going good when he had to return," one of the members said. Other guardsmen agreed with his opinion.

The unit went through rigorous military tactics under the watchful eyes of regimental officers, and the opinion of the group, Capt. Glenn L. Bierly, who heads the

CHAPTER III

Meegan tried to hide a smile, knowing Sue's old tendency toward snobbishness, her favorite and most cherished stories of her Revolutionary ancestors and her tight little social world into which no one new was ever welcome. Sue's world was such a little world and such a satisfactory world to her that at times Meegan had thought that Sue blew new thoughts from her mind as fast as they came just as she would have no new people in her life because she was afraid of newness and change.

When the telephone rang, Sue excused herself and told Meegan to wait and went upstairs to answer it, explaining as she went that she always took her calls upstairs. Nothing then would ever induce her to take them downstairs once she had made up her mind to take them upstairs.

Meegan waited, feeling heartened and thinking in terms of cold dollars and cents and the fact that she could make money this summer and also have time to swim and play tennis and help at home.

Sue came downstairs slowly. Meegan thought immediately that Sue had had bad news, for usually she moved quickly and her genuine love of gossip with an old friend would characteristically make her hurry back to the living room. She was smiling a queer, twisted smile as though she wished she would laugh at the news but could not.

"Clare is coming home for the summer. She and her husband have taken the Haynie house. Betsy called me . . . It was in the paper this morning but I never read the paper until lunch." Then she tried to laugh but it was forced, foolish laughter quite unlike her. "Isn't it funny, her wanting to come back after so many years? I wonder why . . ."

Meegan thought then that Sue had said only Clare, she had said only one name and that if she had not seen the paper that morning she would have known instantly whom Sue meant. There was only one Clare for all of those who had grown up with her. And even if they pretended that Clare was safely out of their lives, they secretly feared that she would come back and be what she had been in the past. Then Meegan knew why Sue looked uneasy and why her laughter had been forced and foolish. Van had been in love with Clare, too . . . They had all known it at the time and he had not married Sue until Clare had married Fayne. Sharply Meegan recalled that the only time she had ever seen Van look unhappy was the day Clare had married Fayne in the island church . . . She thought, this is change for you, too. But not newness. Clare isn't new to any of us. You can't exclude her. Your little world will have to expand to include her again . . .

"Yes, I saw it."

Sue tried to laugh again but her eyes and her hands were nervous. And Sue deplored nerves and lack of control or emotionalism in others.

"Oh, well, maybe she'll be . . . Maybe it'll be fun . . ."

Meegan nodded. Then she asked, "Who are the people next door? I'd like to call on them."

"Oh! You mean . . . Oh, yes . . . The Lesters . . . That's all I know. And the little girl told me her mother had seventy-two dresses to wear this summer. Imagine, seventy-two dresses!"

When Meegan managed to leave, she walked across to the large stone and stucco house. More than a few of the island homes were being rented this year and there would be new faces where once only faces long familiar had been. It was a changing world in which one's mind must be sufficiently elastic to meet the changes with new values sharply scrutinized. For the people of her generation, she thought, the change would be either a failure or a victory. Perhaps no more would there be a safe middle course. Perhaps one would live intensely or die.

She did not see anyone about the house or grounds. They had probably gone swimming. Then on the side porch she saw a dark head rise from a wicker chair and an instant later a vivid, pretty girl in a blue skirt and white sweater was looking at her sullenly.

"Hello," Meegan said. This could not be Mrs. Lester. She was too young. "Is Mrs. Lester there?"

But the girl continued to stare sullenly, her dark eyes brooding unhappily upon her. Meegan did not think she would speak at all. Suddenly the girl's hand came up and she opened the screened door.

"She'll be back any time now. Won't you come in?"

Obviously unwelcome, Meegan nevertheless stepped up to the porch where there were several wicker chairs and a wicker chaise longue and a maple table covered with magazines. Toys had been dropped everywhere. One never saw any toys at Sue's and often Meegan had wondered if Sue's children were allowed toys.

She sat in one of the wicker chairs and the girl sat tentatively on the side of the chaise longue. She was slim and beautifully tanned and though Meegan knew she had tried hard to look fashionable casual, she had not altogether succeeded. All too plain were her efforts to look as the girls on the island looked without effort or thought. Her black hair, shoulder-length, was shiny and beautiful.

When Meegan said, "I'm Meegan McLean," the girl looked as though Meegan had said something which stung her pride.

She said, "How do you do," coldly. Then, "I'm Mr. Lester's sister, Erica."

"I'm very glad to know you. You see, I'd like to see Mrs. Lester because I'm trying to organize a group of children to take swimming in the morning and afternoon. I've just seen Mrs. Van Nostrand and I'm calling for her children and I thought Mrs. Lester might also be interested."

"For money?"

It was the coldest young voice Meegan had ever heard. It startled her. She wondered why it also hurt her.

"Yes, for money. We are not all rich here. In fact, very few of us are any more."

"I thought you were."

"Why; what do you know about me?"

At that moment a long-nosed beige car, very new and very shiny, drove in the driveway and stopped and a large blonde woman in a long white beach coat alighted first and then assisted a blonde little girl and boy in abbreviated red bathing suits. The children were chattering happily but above their voices the woman cried in rough but good-natured tones, "Sandra . . . Roy . . . Go around the back way and get Fanny to give you a shower. Tell her to get all the sand off you . . . Hurry, Baby . . . Don't stand there. You'll get cold. . . "As she came closer Meegan saw that her yellow hair, fashioned as a crown of short curls, was dark at the roots and that her face and body had probably been lovely before they had thickened. Still her face had a candid, open look and she was a person who would laugh easily, eat heartily and worry little. She would be a comfortable person to be with because there were no secrets in her and because, despite the synthetic hair and highly roughed cheeks, she was naturally maternal and naturally good-humored.

When she saw Meegan, her eyes quickened and she smiled. The next moment she flung a hurried, anxious look at Erica.

"Hello," she said. She almost sang it as she stepped up to the porch. "Gosh, look at me, bringing in all this sand . . . Erica, didn't you offer . . ."

"I'm Meegan McLean," Meegan said as Erica passed cigarets and kept her distance. "No, thanks. I don't use them."

"Thanks," Mrs. Lester said to her sister-in-law and took a cigaret and lighted it with a plump hand and blew out a great gust of smoke. "Wouldn't you like something to drink?"

"Thank you, no. Not now." Then, smiling, speaking pleasantly she explained why she had come, seeing that it was making Mrs. Lester happier by the minute.

"Why, sure . . . I'd love to have them go and they'd love it! They're not bad kids. Spoiled, I guess. You can't help spoiling them."

Erica asked, "How much do you charge, Miss McLean?"

"Oh, Erica, what difference does it make?"

"The charge is two dollars a week for six days," Meegan said.

"Is that all?" Mrs. Lester cried. "That's nothing. Sure, they can go and you're welcome to the job."

Meegan wished that she could leave now. There were chores at home and since her mother did not drive it was her task to drive to the mainland for groceries. Then, too, if she did not get back before Toby left for the day, he would take the car. Still she hesitated, hating to spoil Mrs. Lester's pleasure at her call and hoping that Erica would thaw.

Mrs. Lester leaned forward. "You're coming down here every summer, I suppose."

"Well, almost. There were a few summers we went other places." The summer in Europe with her father, that wonderful summer, and the summer at Bar Harbor with her mother and Toby . . .

"This is our first here," Mrs. Lester said. "It's a beautiful place. I told Roy, that's my husband, that I bet if you flew over it it would look like a Christmas garden. But Roy can't enjoy it much. He's too busy on defense production. Keeps a cot right at the factory and sleeps there. He'll be lucky if he can get down for a swim on Sunday. That's the way it goes. When you're broke, you have all the time in the world and no money and when you have money, you don't have time to spend it and enjoy it. Oh, listen to me, rattling on about myself. Will you stay to lunch?"

"Thank you but I can't today. I have to see about lunch for my mother and brother. I'd like to." She meant it. . . . She wasn't like Sue, she thought. . . . She liked newness and change when they were as refreshing as Mrs. Lester.

"Some other time then?"

"Of course. You're very kind."

When Meegan arose, Mrs. Lester arose. Erica sat stiffly still.

Mrs. Lester said, "I'll have the kids ready for you in the morning. If you have any trouble with them, don't hold back. It won't hurt 'em. I can tell somebody else to spank them even if I can't do it myself."

"I'm sure I won't have any trouble with them."

When Meegan left, Mrs. Lester turned to Erica.

"What made you act like that? You weren't even polite to her!"

Erica lifted her eyes. She said quietly, "It's easy for her. Everything is easy for her."

Spellman Lauds 'Valor and Value' of Americans at War

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The Most Rev. Francis J. Spellman, archbishop of New York, who has been visiting American army and navy stations all over the world during the past nine months, has declared "my admiration for the valor and the value of my countrymen whom I meet and whom I see everywhere grows almost daily."

The archbishop's words were transmitted by short wave from Lourenco Marques, Portuguese East Africa, and broadcast nationally from here.

Speaking of the American people, Archbishop Spellman said:

"I observe their mighty accomplishments in every part of the world. I note the transformation of the American people from a peace-loving, peace-exemplifying people to a people still peace-loving but nevertheless an efficient, hard-fighting people — a brave, strong, righteous-minded people who believe that they are waging war for justice and for freedom for themselves and for other peoples."

He said his admiration for Americans grew as he saw "evidence of the quantity and quality of food and other commodities and supplies that come across the ocean from the factories and homes of America to our soldiers, sailors and flying men."

The archbishop added:

"America has time and time again declared that she wishes no additional territory. And time and time again she has declared that she wished well to all the world. She also has wished for the world national, racial, social and economic stability which must be the crux of any enduring charter or world order of peace. Thus is America doing now and with God's help she will so continue."

A message for you...from 1953

(Today, John Jones is just an average American, wrestling with all the doubts and worries and problems that beset every one of us right now. But let's skip ahead 10 years. Let's look at John Jones then—and listen to him . . .)

"SOMETIMES I feel so good it almost scares me.

"This house—I wouldn't swap a shingle off its roof for any other house on earth. This little valley, with the pond down in the hollow at the back, is the spot I like best in all the world.

"And they're mine. I own 'em. Nobody can take 'em away from me.

"I've got a little money coming in, regularly. Not much—but enough. And I tell you, when you can go to bed every night with nothing on your mind except the fun you're going to have tomorrow—that's as near Heaven as a man gets on this earth!

"It wasn't always so.

"Back in '43—that was our second year of war, when we were really getting into it—I needed cash. Taxes were tough, and then Ellen got sick. Like most everybody else, I was buying War Bonds through the Payroll Plan—and I figured on cashing some of them in. But sick as she was, it was Ellen who talked me out of it.

"'Don't do it, John!' she said. 'Please don't! For the first time in our lives, we're really saving money. It's wonderful to know that every single payday we have more money put aside! John, if we can only keep up this saving, think what it can mean! Maybe someday you won't have to work Maybe we can own a home. And oh, how good it would feel to know that we need never worry about money when we're old!'

"Well, even after she got better, I stayed away from the weekly poker game—quit dropping a little cash at the hot spots now and then—gave up some of the things a man feels he has a right to. We made clothes do—cut out fancy foods. We didn't have as much fun for awhile but we paid our taxes and the doctor and—we didn't touch the War Bonds.

"We didn't touch the War Bonds then, or any other time. And I know this: The world wouldn't be such a swell place today if we had!"

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

My father considered Adams' question for a second, then made a swift decision.

"You'd better tell him everything you heard and saw just as it occurred," he said, "for one thing is certain. Milner will get in touch with Ruth Hayes as soon as possible, and she will tell him what happened. If you vary from her version, he might suspect that you are working for me, and that would be fatal to our plans.

"Tell him," he went on, "that you don't know the reason for any of the proceedings, but that the lady suddenly dashed out on the balcony. Repeat just what my daughter and son-in-law said, and tell them that you brought the lady back into the room. Repeat as much of the subsequent conversation as you can remember, and explain that you finally escorted the caller to the taxi. Tell him that what I wanted of you was the assurance that she had gone, and that then I dismissed you with thanks.

Adams Is Relieved.

Adams' face cleared. "That ought to do the trick," he said. "And she really did get into the taxi and drive away. But I'm not so sure—"

My father finished the sentence for him, as his voice trailed away uncertainly.

"That she won't come back again? Neither am I. So I think you'd better tell Milner that I asked you both to come back and mount guard in this room and on the balcony until daylight. Tell him I didn't tell you why I wanted you to come back, and that you haven't the faintest idea why you're wanted.

"Incidentally, you'd better correct one statement you made to him," he continued with the infinite attention to detail which characterizes him. You see the lady never saw me, so you'd better say that you remember now it was Mrs. Graham not I, who told you to put the lady in the taxi. Say, also that while you received your original order for the balcony from me, you didn't see me again until you came back here, that it was my son-in-law who told you to report back here, but that I previously had told you I wanted to see you as soon as your job of watching was finshed."

"I understand," Adams said, "and I'll get it straight, sir."

"I'm sure you will," my father told him, and then the two men left for their interview with Milner, and we all relaxed into our chairs again.

"Do you really think, Dad, that she'll try anything more tonight?" Dicky asked.

"No, I don't," he replied. "I think she's pretty well deflated, but there's no use leaving any loopholes for either her or Milner."

He looked at his wrist watch, then at me.

"The curtain has rung down, my dear," he said, smiling, but with a note in his voice which I knew meant that he was to be obeyed. "You've had a box seat, and you've also played an active part well. Now it's time for you to go to bed. You'll only have a few hours sleep at the most."

"I slept, you know, on the couch here," I protested feebly.

Orders Madge To Rest.

"Yes, I know, but now you're going into your bedroom and get some real rest," he said inexorably. "Richard can camp on the couch here when he and I get through with Adams and Winters, and I'll go over to my own suite. We'll meet early in the morning. Better have the operator call you."

"I'll do that," I said obediently, rising and kissing both of them. "Good night."

I went to my bedroom, with that feeling of relaxation and content at being "bossed" with kindly solicitude, which I think sometimes comes to every woman, no matter how self-centered and independent she may be. And when, after making all preparations for quick dressing in the morning, and giving my call to the operator, I climbed into bed, not even the remembrance of the exciting scene I had just passed through could keep sleep from my eyes. I knew nothing more until the bell of the telephone at the head of my bed, roused me.

"Six-thirty, Mrs. Graham," the voice of the operator said, and even as I thanked her and put the receiver up again, I saw Katharine standing in the camouflaged doorway of the other suite.

"I guessed you'd be putting in a call," she said, "so after I was pretty sure you were asleep, I pulled this door ajar, so I'd hear the call, too. What can I do for you?"

"Not a thing," I told her. "I have everything ready for my trip. Oh, yes, you can order breakfast for three—Dickey, you and me—in the living room of the other suite. I'll go in and waken Dicky now. Then he can tell me what he wants."

"All right," she said. "I'll just shower while you're gone. Then you can use that shower and Dicky can have the one in this suite."

"That ought to work beautifully," I said, and went into the living room where I found Dicky already awake and staring at the ceiling.

"Hello!" he said. "Here's a thought that woke me up. Are you sure that maid disguise of yours is going to be foolproof? For if Ruth Hayes ever spots you, it'll be curtains for you!"

Try This Recipe for Fritters

By BETSY NEWMAN

NEXT TO the oyster—which we don't eat in summer—is his next of kin, the clam. There are soft shell clams and hard shells. The soft shell is usually called "steamer," and is served as "steamed clams." Hard shells are eaten raw on the half shell, and other clams are used in cooking and chowders. Try clam fritters some evening when you lack meat stamps and must serve a hearty meal. Fresh clams are used in the recipe.

Today's Menu.

Clam Fritters
Fluffy Mashed Potatoes
Beet Salad Corn on the Cob
Berry Cobblers Coffee

Clam Fritters.

1½ doz. clams
⅜ c. clam liquor
3 beaten eggs
⅜ c. milk
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
1⅜ c. flour
Cooking fat
1 tbsp. melted butter or margarine.

Separate clams from their liquor, split clams, remove dark stomach contents and rinse in cold water. Mince clams as finely as possible. Sift flour, salt and pepper; add clam liquor, milk and eggs and stir until smooth. Add butter and minced clams. Saute in heavy frying pan in thin cakes, or drop by tablespoonfuls into hot (380 degrees F.) deep fat and cook until golden brown.

Betrothal Told

The engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Ruth A. Mengert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Shover, 191 Home avenue, to Boyd R. Stull, San Diego, Calif., was revealed to 30 of her friends at an announcement tea Sunday at the Colonial Guest House, Wooster road.

Guests learned of the coming nuptials when they were served from a tea table centered with a miniature bride, holding a prayer book. The wedding will be an event of August, with the date to be announced later.

The long tea table was dainty with lighted white tapers, surrounded with pink rosebuds. Mrs. Frank Mengert, sister-in-law of the bride-elect, presided at the tea table.

Miss Mengert is a member of Zeta chapter, Tri Gamma sorority. She is employed by Dr. J. E. Dunham. The bride-elect plans to leave around Aug. 9 for San Diego to join Mr. Stull for their wedding.

Third Class Petty Officer Stull is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Kirkpatrick, 140 Sturges avenue. He is at the present stationed at the destroyer base in San Diego. Both young people are graduates of Mansfield Senior high school.

The first of a series of prenuptial honors for the bride-to-be will be given Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Frank Mengert, 306 Taylor road, with Miss Margaret Fiedler as associate hostess. On Aug. 4 hostesses who will honor Miss Mengert are Miss Jessie Bryner and Mrs. Vernon Smeltzer.

Picnic Fetes Pastor, Wife

Rev. and Mrs. Roland Showalter and their son, Johnny, were guests of honor Sunday night at a farewell picnic supper attended by 83 members and friends of the Church of the Brethren at Lincoln Heights.

Rev. Showalter and his family will leave the early part of August for Lincoln, N. Y., where they will reside for the next three years while Rev. Showalter attends Colgate-Rochester college.

Rev. Wilbur Miley of Bellville presented the couple with a farewell gift from those present. The O. B. F. class gave Mrs. Showalter a personal gift.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, July 20.

THE AUGURIES for this day indicate unusual activity, with probable agitation and excitement, incidental to major moves of sudden and surprising precipitation. While the attitude may be progressive, with sound ideas of promoting practical propositions, yet an inclination to the obscure, idealistic or unique might upset calculations unless firmly directed into workable channels. There are forces at hand of a devastating nature, possibly concerning financial, domestic, social or love relations, all of which need safeguarding and solidifying. Work for permanency and stability.

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year of exciting activity. Although the mind may be capable, shrewd and sagacious, with sound and solid basis, yet tendencies toward the fanciful, idealistic and visionary must be turned to the practical and constructive. In finance, social, domestic and affectional relations there is danger through impulsive, reckless acts, or undue emotionalism.

A child born on this day may have many splendid talents, with ingenuity and skill, but may be carried into danger by its impulses and emotionalism.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

AIDING PARTNER UNDULY

Pretty clear-cut treatment is meted out by the latest Laws of Contract Bridge to a member of the defending side who does something irregular which is likely to aid his partner in deciding the course of action to be followed. Several quite definite and understandable provisions are the following.

1. Regarding premature action, if a defender (a) leads before his partner has played to the current trick; (b) plays, when fourth hand, before his partner has played (unless declarer has played already from both his hand and dummy, in which case defenders may play in any order); (c) before his partner has played, improperly directs his attention to the current trick in any way, as by pushing the cards toward him, or naming his own played card, or by saying it is already his—in any of these cases, declarer may require the other defender to play to the current trick his highest or lowest card in the suit led, or to play a card (subject to his duty to follow suit) of another specified suit. Failure to do as thus directed constitutes a revoke. In the case of (a), if the offender fails to win the current trick, declarer may also exact the penalty for a lead out of turn.

2. If a defender improperly suggests a lead or play, the declarer may announce that he will impose a lead penalty when next it is the other defender's turn to lead, at which time declarer may require or forbid him to lead a specified suit.

3. If a defender improperly makes a remark which discloses to his partner the nature of his hand, or his intentions or desires, or which locates an unplayed card as being in an unexposed hand, the declarer may announce that he will impose a lead penalty when next it is either defender's lead, at which time declarer may require or forbid the lead of a specified suit.

4. If a defender improperly exposes his remaining card or cards, the declarer may treat the remaining cards of either defender as penalty cards. The hand of the other defender may then be picked up. Declarer should avail himself of this penalty only to the extent necessary to protect his side from possible loss.

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

On the shelves of my small library there's a book by T. S. Matthews called "The Moon's No Fool."

Now relax. Just because libraries and books are mentioned, it's no reason to suspect that what follows will be a learned discourse on astronomy, and the moon.

The point of the book, as I recall it, is that some guys do some very dizzy things under the inspiration of a bit of moonlight, and that's why these guys are sometimes called looney, and these guys are at their very looniest when the moon is at the full.

Meanwhile the moon rides high, calm and serene, undisturbed by the dizzy doings of men.

All of which is merely a prelude to the announcement that the balmy boys of Coolridge will play their second annual moonlight round of golf tonight starting about 10:30.

Tonight's moonlight meander o'er the meadow is J. B. Moke's idea, so I'm told. Fred Huntsman says J. B. looked up the calendar some time ago, discovered that the moon would be at its very fullest on July 19, and set the date. Then tried to move it up to Saturday night, but Fred held out for the 19th. So the moon would be big, and round.

They've invited me to tonight's moonlight madness. Honestly, now, do I look like a looney?

I can run into enough trouble on a golf course in broad daylight, without hunting it by moonlight. But I understand there's a very good reason why J. B. wants to gambol o'er the green by the light of the moon. He was that successful last year.

He sank an approach shot from the rear of No. 1 green, but Huntsman still maintains that he would never have made it if the moon had really been out. "We got kind of a late start and it was dark when J. B. made that shot. That's why I want the moon full tonight, and I hope J. B. doesn't close his eyes and make a hole in one," says Fred.

The boys had a lot of fun at last year's moonlight golf round, so I understand. There were J. B. and Fred, and Fred Huntsman, jr. and I think Jimmy Musille was one of the frolicsome foursome. Maybe there were more along.

"I did feel kind of foolish," J B. reported later, "when I got home around 1 a. m. and tried to explain to Mrs. Moke that I had been playing golf."

When I go nuts, I think I might Go shoot a golf by bright moonlight.

Provident Loans Defeated Twice

Pitcherless Provident Loan girls took it twice on the chin yesterday afternoon at North Lake park, losing to Columbus Wilks Meats 4-2 to Painesville Arcades, state champions, 10-4.

Outfielder LaVonna Schaefer was called in to pitch both games, and did well enough—for an outfielder. She held the hard-hitting Wilks to seven blows in the first tilt, but the double duty was too much and she gave up 12 hits to Painesville.

Meanwhile the Provident attack was limited to the top end of the batting order in each game.

Sgt. Jean Herrick of the WAC was back in the game for Providents, playing short in each tilt

Four Tilts Suspended In League

Curfew Law Doesn't End National Battles.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

THIS season may come to be remembered as the one in which a certified public accountant couldn't figure out the National league standings on any given day.

Right now there are no fewer than four "suspended games" in the senior circuit which must be played to completion at some future date. Two of them already have been entered in the standings as won and lost for the teams involved, the other two have not.

Yesterday's Pennsylvania Sunday curfew halted the second game of a doubleheader at Pittsburgh after seven innings with the world champion St. Louis Cardinals leading 6-5. Under ordinary baseball rules this would have become a victory for the Redbirds as soon as play ceased. But the National league passed an "anti-stalling" rule last winter which said that contests halted before the end of nine innings because of curfews later must be completed.

So instead of a victory for the Cards, who earlier in the day had whipped the Pirates 7-4 for Mort Cooper's 12th triumph, the game simply entered a state of suspended animation until Sept. 1, the date agreed upon for its conclusion.

At Boston the Massachusetts Sunday curfew stopped the second contest between the Braves and Brooklyn Dodgers in the midst of a Boston rally in the sixth inning. The Braves had just scored three runs to tie the count at 4-4 and had the bases loaded with one out when play was halted. That will be the situation when play is resumed at an unspecified later date. The Dodgers bagged the first game 8 5 in 11 innings.

The American league has no rule and everything showing in the standings today will count—very likely toward another pennant for the New York Yankees.

The Yanks yesterday swept a doubleheader from the Philadelphia Athletics to extend their winning streak to eight games and 12 victories in their last 13 starts. Bill Johnson's three-run homer helped wrap up the first decision 7-2 for Ernie Bonham and the Yanks struggled to a 4 3 verdict in ten innings in the nightcap for Spud Chandler's 11th win.

Washington's stout-hearted Senators, in second place, kept the pace by taking two games from the Boston Red Sox 9-2 and 5-4. The Cleveland Indians subdued the St. Louis Browns twice 4-3 and 10-7.

In the other American league skirmishing Detroit divided a double-header with the Chicago White Sox, taking the first game 12-4 with an 18-hit attack featuring homers by Rudy York and Paul Richards and dropping the second 4-1 to Johnny Humphries' pitching.

In the National league the Chicago Cubs crushed the Cincinnati Reds twice 3 1 and 7-0 to vault into fifth place.

The Giants topped the Phillies twice 10-6 and 3 2.

So It Has Come To This: Women Coach Athletic Teams

Life-saving, too

Slide, sister, slide!

Passing fair? No, fair passer

Brother, what form!

So many high school athletic coaches and physical education instructors have gone into the service that it may be necessary to draft women to help coach school sports this fall. With an eye toward this, New York university has a summer physical education camp at Lake Sebago, N. Y., where women are being taught how to coach men's games.

Upsets Mark League Play

Athletics Defeated and Yunckers Win One.

It was a day of upsets in Mansfield's Commercial baseball league yesterday.

American Legion edged Athletic Supplies 7-6 in 13 innings. And Yuncker Sports Swamped East End Merchants 18-2.

It was the first defeat of the season for the Athletics and the first victory of the campaign for Yunckers.

Athletics started out to make the usual runaway, chalking up four runs in the first stanza, and added two more in the third. Legion kept pecking away at Jack Hammett's offerings with two runs in the first, two in the fourth and two in the sixth to tie it up.

Then Dewey Durant's club got to Jack Elliott for a marker in the 13th, and the Athletics had their first loss marked against them. Lefty Cochrane limited the loop leaders to eight hits over the long route.

Tinkey almost hurled a shutout for Yunckers, the East Enders failing to tally until the ninth frame as they collected only seven hits.

* * *

Yunckers won it early with four runs in the second, but they piled up nine runs in the eighth just for fun.

Sport Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK —(AP)— Interested in the "inside" of the ice game these hot days, or would you prefer to have some of the ice inside you? . . . Well, here's how we get it from a couple of guys who can be called "reliable sources" . . . The National Hockey league, which had plenty of tough going last season, will be an eight-club circuit with Cleveland and Buffalo added . . . It isn't that Al Sutphin and Eddie Shore want to give up that combination of minor league expenses and minor league gates, but there won't be enough players for the American league to operate.

NOT FOR THE BOOK.

Chicago scribes tell this one on Jimmy Dykes, who is carrying on his feud with umpires in a peaceful manner this season . . . It seems Jimmy wasn't satisfied with the umps' observation of a rather indefinite rule banning quick returns by pitchers so he clipped the item out of his book and posted it on the umpires' dressing room. . . . A few days later Dykes thought one of the Philadelphia pitchers was making quick returns so he started shouting at Bill Summers about it . . . "What do you know about quick returns?" Summers came back, "that rule isn't in your book." . . . "And it isn't either," Dykes ruefully admitted as he displayed the mutilated page.

Gunder Haegg's race at Cleveland will be held at Baldwin-Wallace college because the A. A. U. couldn't interest any of the papers there in sponsoring the event . . . George Metkovich, the Coast league whiz recently bought by the Red Sox, is likened to Ted Williams by no less an authority than Lefty O'Doul, who taught Williams some of the tricks of the hitting trade.

Senator Backs Service Game

Says Army-Navy Game Wouldn't Interfere.

WASHINGTON — (UP) — The army-navy football game could be witnessed by 75,000 to 100,000 persons without interfering "with essential emergency needs," Sen. James M Mead, D., N. Y., said today in renewing an appeal to save one of the nation's keenest rivalries.

He urged again, in a letter to Acting Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, that the game be played in a big eastern seaboard stadium to provide funds for army-navy relief.

"Like the Kentucky derby and the all-star baseball game, this contest can be localized and played after the rush hours are over so as not to prove neither a housing or transportation problem," he wrote.

Fate of the game, reportedly opposed by the war department, is scheduled to be decided in the near future. Before the army's decision is made, Mead told Patterson, a thorough study "in the light of existing conditions" should be made.

"Lack of manpower" was the reason for the decision, said Lloyd Brazil, athletic director, in making the announcement yesterday.

Predict End Of Baseball

Can't See How Game Can Start Next Year.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

CHICAGO—(INS)—It is surprising, considering the number of human remnants of the 3-A and 4-F variety that now abound in what is comically called the national pastime, to hear so many men of acumen and sound judgment predict (strictly in privacy) that baseball hasn't one chance in 20 of starting all over again next season.

* * *

This year, they say, is to be the last until the war's over, this declaration evidently being based on the belief that married men with dependents, i. e., the 3-A guys, will find themselves being advanced to 1-A within a few months, or less.

* * *

Just what this feeling is based on hasn't been made clear, though you hear considerable mention of Washington having privately passed the word along.

Most of the clubs you see in a swing around the eastern wheel are pretty much down to their underwear, as you might say, in man power.

They still have the roster up to the 25-player limit but are admittedly in a position where they couldn't very well afford to lose, say, even an extra infielder or a relief pitcher — particularly with couble headers, night games, noon games, twilight games and, in fact, practically everything but daybreak games putting an unusual strain on player resources.

Of course, the one club that seems fairly capable of withstanding any strain either the schedule of the war might exact is the St. Louis Cardinals, who are full of 4-F-ers, sedentary family men and enough class to be champions of the world.

Yet they've just lost Howard Pollet and Jimmy Brown, they're soon to lose Harry Brecheen and the word is that further inroads by the draft are soon to come.

The Cards were the one club which, up to now, seemed to have the man-power licked. So maybe the alarmists in the east have it right. Maybe there will be no baseball next year.

Sport Excellence Texan's Trouble

DALLAS—(AP)—It's not manpower trouble but a question of athletic excellence in the case of big Tom Hamilton.

Hamilton is the all-state basketball and baseball player at Crozier Tech High School of Dallas. But he's also good at anything else he tries.

For instance, he worked only at odd moments from his baseball, heavy scholastic program and other activities, in order to develop discus throwing ability.

It paid off. He won the discus throw in the city track meet and it was his first place in this event that brought Crozier Tech a surprise victory in the regional meet.

Hamilton made four athletic letters during the second semester of school—basketball, baseball, tennis and track. He doesn't play football because he doesn't want to take a chance on an injury that might hurt his baseball career. He has already received offers from major league clubs but wants to go to college before entering professional baseball—that is, when he's through with the armed service, which he expects to call him soon.

BEAU JACK RULES FAVORITE TONIGHT

PHILADELPHIA— (U.P.) —Former Lightweight Champion Beau Jack rules a 12 to 5 favorite for his 10-round bout with Philadelphia's Johnny Hutchinson at Shibe Park tonight.

Hottest drawing card in boxing despite his defeat in May at the hands of Bob Montgomery, the former Augusta, Ga., shoeshine boy can regain much of his lost prestige if he defeats Hutchinson, a stablemate of Montgomery.

Golf Tourney Sets Record

233 Entries Filed For Tam O'Shanter.

By TOMMY DEVINE

CHICAGO — (U.P.) — A record-breaking field of 233 contestants teed off today in the qualifying round of the third annual all-American golf tournament at the Tam O'Shanter Country club.

* * *

The amateur tournament inaugurates a hectic week-long links carnival during which the $10,000 all-America open and the women's open also will be played.

The three tournaments form golfdom's wackiest show and combine the best features of the links, a marathon race and a three-ring circus. The first golfers were off the tee at 7 a. m., and it will be dusk before the bulky field completes the first half of the qualifying test.

Complete confusion doesn't touch the tournaments however, until mid-week when the 64 qualifiers in the amateur compete simultaneously in the open. They vie at match play in the amateur, but adhere to medal play standards so that their scores can be counted in the open. Stymies therefore are eliminated and all putts must be holed out.

With the national amateur a war-time casualty, the all-America rates as the nation's premier Simon-pure links event and it has drawn a brilliant field in keeping with that ranking.

Marvin (Bud) Ward of Spokane, Wash., winner of the tournament a year ago, is leaving his title undefended and his absence merely adds to the bitter championship scrambling. Wilford Wehrle of Racine, Wis., runner-up to Ward in 1942 and lone one of the country's top amateur stars, rates as the early favorite.

Wehrle has made a swing of mid-west courses in the past two weeks to tune-up for the all-America and he has hit a hot scoring streak. For his last eight practice rounds, the lanky Racine star has cropped 36 strokes off par. Over this stretch Wehrle has had a 66, five rounds of 67 and two of 69.

Despite his brilliance Wehrle is certain to find the going tough for the title contenders include Doug Hill of Cincinnati, O., and Johnny Racey, Cleveland, O.

While not a title choice, a sure-fire gallery favorite will be World Heavyweight Boxing Champion Joe Louis who is making his debut into major golfing circles. Louis is on furlough from his army base at Fort Riley, Kas.

Birds Creeping Up On Leaders

Win 16 of Last 23 To Trail By Three Games.

(By Associated Press)

Indianapolis and Milwaukee have been squabbling over first place in the American Association so much recently that they haven't noticed how much the Columbus Red Birds have crept up on them.

The Red Birds have won 16 of their last 23 games and are just three games back of first place Indianapolis.

While the Tribe and Milwaukee were dividing a doubleheader yesterday, the Columbus entry was sweeping a pair of games from St Paul, 8-2 and 4-0.

Meanwhile Milwaukee's Brewers remained just a game back of Indianapolis by grabbing an 8 to 3 second game win after the Tribe had breezed off with the opener, 6 to 3.

Louisville took a pair from last place Kansas City, 2 to 0 and 11 to 4, to rise above the Saints into sixth place.

Minneapolis and Toledo divided a twin bill, the Millers taking the first game, 5 to 2, and the Mud Hens the second, 8 to 5.

Holy Cross Vets Recall Defeat

FORT EUSTIS, Va.—(AP)—Four members of the Holy Cross football team which last fall routed the great Boston college grid machine, 55 to 12, are taking their basic training at this anti-aircraft replacement training center, and getting ready to "carry the ball" for Uncle Sam.

The four: Johnny Bezemes, halfback; Bob Sullivan, fullback; Ray Ball, quarterback, and Bill Swiacki, end, all hail from Massachusetts, and were called together from the enlisted reserve corps. Bezemes was a senior and the others juniors.

The lanky, brown-eyed Bezemes, recalling the victory over Boston college, said "most of our plays were moustraps, and we mouse-trapped their big line to death. Their pass defense was weak, and we scored three touchdowns that way. . . ."

Indians Capture Twin Bill

Break Losing Streak, Pound Bobo From Hill.

DAYTON — (AP) — Snapping a fourgame losing siege with a pair of victories in St. Louis yesterday, Cleveland's sixth place Indians rest from league warfare today to play the Cincinnati Reds in an exhibition here.

Yesterday's triumphs were taken 4 to 3 and 10 to 7. The finale was highlighted by a seven-run Indian assault in the third inning that drove Bobo Newsom from the mound in the first appearance of his third term as a Brownie pitcher.

The Tribe rests tomorrow and then opens the season's second eastern trip at Philadelphia.

Jeff Heath banged his fifth home run of the season in the first game yesterday, pushing Oris Hockett and Mickey Rocco across the plate ahead of him. Heath, however, was injured in the nightcap, when struck by a thrown ball while heading into second base.

Heath's homer with two aboard knotted the court, and the winner was an unearned tally in the ninth inning.

Vernon Kennedy, who relieved Al Milnar in the fifth inning, received credit for the first victory, and Jim Gagby won his eighth victory in the nightcap, yielding the mound to Mike Naymick in the ninth.

The Tribe scored in the first inning of the afterpiece, without a hit. In the third inning, a seven-hit barrage produced seven runs, and the Indians added two more in the sixth.

Bagby gave up two runs in the fourth, and the Brownies added two more in the sixth when Mike Chartak homered with one on. Another tally in the seventh and two more in the ninth, when Bagby left for the showers, ended the St. Louis scoring.

CINCINNATI —(AP)— Everyone in the National league has given the Cincinnati Reds at least one double pasting except Philadelphia, but maybe that's another one of Rookie Owner Bill Cox's ideas of being different.

The Brooklyn Dodgers, who move in here Wednesday for a series with the Redlegs, have dumped the Cincinnatians three times in double bills; the Cards, Braves, Pirates and Giants once each, and the Chicago Cubs, who did the trick yesterday, twice.

The Reds went down, without very much swinging, 3 to 1 in the opener and 7 to 0 in the nightcap before 13,429 customers.

In the first game, Johnny Vander Meer presented his opposing pitcher, Claude Passeau, the contest by walking six Cubs and making a wild pitch.

The Reds got their run in the second stanza of the first game by virtue of two Cub errors, Steve Mesner's single and a long fly to the outfield.

In the third, Stan Hack singled, two walks and a fly ball gave a run to the Cubs and then all bats were silent until the eighth when another pair of walks, a wild pitch and Lou Novikoff's fly allowed the Cubs to break the deadlock. Passeau iced the game when he doubled in the ninth to score Lenny Nerullo who had previously singled.

Bill Nicholson got his 13th home run of the year, hit a double and two singles to drive in four of the Cubs runs.

Green, AFL Chief, Delivers Ultimatum On Food Prices

WARNS LABOR WILL DEMAND HIKE IN PAY

Declares OPA, WFA Fails To Bring Charges Down To Reasonable Level.

(By Associated Press)

DETROIT — Asserting that "America has failed to hold the line against inflation," William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, served notice today that "unless prices of food are brought down to a reasonable level," organized labor "will have no other recourse but to demand wage increases."

Green's ultimatum, in an address prepared for delivery before the convention of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes, followed by less than a month a warning by CIO President Philip Murray to a congressional committee that labor would demand scrapping of the "little steel" formula unless prices are rolled back.

Under the "little steel" formula, the government has permitted wage increases of 15 per cent over Jan. 1, 1941, levels to offset rising living costs.

After reviewing progress on the war fronts and labor's contribution to the war production effort, Green said "there has been an almost complete lack of appreciation in our conntry of the corresponding need of keeping America's soldiers of production in top-notch condition."

"Our domestic war economy," he said, "has not been geared to the need of protecting the workers against the hazards of inflation and its concomitant evils. This situation is becoming more and more serious each day. Profiteers and speculators are sapping the strength of the nation's army of workers. Drastic action must be taken at once to avert a breakdown of our wartime economy."

Green called the food situation "the domestic emergency of the moment" and demanded "intelligent and orderly action * * * to assure workers and their families of a decent place to live in and enough nourishing food to eat within the reach of their income."

Both the office of price administration and the war food administration, he declared, "have fallen down on the job" and workers who "accepted food rationing cheerfully are unable now to buy the amounts allotted to them under the rationing system" because "the cost of basic foods has mounted sky-high despite the price control program."

AFL food surveys in principal cities, he said, show that food prices have increased from 50 to 200 per cent since the war started.

McGregor To Be In Mansfield To Hear Problems

Congressman J. Harry McGregor, representing the 17th district in Washington, said today he would be in Mansfield Friday and Saturday, July 30 and 31, to discuss with Mansfield and Richland county residents their problems as they pertain to the national picture.

Congressman McGregor said he had been granted permission to establish headquarters at the Richland county courthouse for the two days, beginning at 9 a. m. He added that he hoped enough of the people he represents in congress will appear to make an open forum or round-table discussion possible both evenings.

Besides discussing the problems of his constituents with them, the congressman said he would be glad to receive suggestions for action on national issues when congress re-convenes early in the fall.

Congressman McGregor will conduct similar discussion sessions in Ashland July 28 and 29 and early in August will be in Delaware, Newark, and Coshocton, other cities in the 17th district.

AIR EXPRESS RATES SLASHED

Agency Announces Overall Cut Of More Than 10 Per Cent.

Railway Express agency today announced that air express rates will have a base reduction of 12½ per cent effective July 15, with an overall reduction averaging 10½ to 11 per cent.

The tremendous growth in air express has made it possible for this reduction to be passed on to the users, C. R. Deisler, agent of the Express agency, said. He added that it will affect practically all the cities served by the principal U. S. commercial airlines.

The present minimum charge of $1 per shipment remains.

BYRNES ORDERS SURVEY OF WAR, CIVILIAN NEEDS

Seeks To Avoid Home Front Breakdowns From Lack of Supplies, Repairs.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, it was learned on high authority today, has ordered a long-range study of over-all military and civilian requirements in an effort to avoid breakdowns on the home front.

There was a possibility that Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries board during World War 1, would be called upon to head up the latest fact-finding effort.

Baruch, whose study of the rubber crisis for President Roosevelt resulted in the creation of an independent rubber administration with William M. Jeffers as its head, has indicated his availability for similar tasks. When Byrnes was named to head the office of war mobilization, he publicly announced that he intended to make greater use of Baruch in the capacity of unofficial adviser.

Byrnes' decision to probe military and civilian needs was viewed as a further indication that the war mobilizer is seeking to establish a long-range pattern for the American economy, comparable to over-all strategy formulated to carry on the war on the battle fronts.

Purpose of the study, according to informed sources, is to weigh military and civilian needs in the light of existing supplies of materials with consideration to production facilities.

It is apparent from the outline of the study that Byrnes wishes to avoid any crises which loom as a possibility should concentration on war manufacturing bring neglect of civilian needs to the point where transportation, communications, or other public utilities collapse because of overlooked repair needs.

It was pointed out that the telephone industry—strained to the breaking point under the impact of war—has been functioning with a meager 10 per cent of the materials it used during 1941. Railroads, vital to the war production, have been operating with less than their minimum requirements of new equipment, as steel capacity has been devoted to the output of ships, tanks and guns.

Other public services, all vital to the maintenance of war production, such as street car systems, bus lines, air lines, city water and sewage systems, gas and electric companies, hospitals, and public institutions of all kinds, have been 'getting by by the skin of their teeth," officials declare.

The Byrnes study is designed to bring these needs into balance with war production requirements.

and the first bracket surtax. Thus persons with net taxable incomes of more than $2,000 above exemptions, and those with income from other sources than wages and salaries, would not be on a current basis unless they continued to make quarterly payments.

The Sept. 15 declarations will show estimated income for the year. They also will show the tax installments paid March 15 and June 15 and the estimated amount being withheld in the last six months of the year. If the total of these amounts does not appear to be enough to cover the entire 1943 income tax, the individual must pay the difference in two installments. One installment is due Sept. 15 and one on Dec. 15.

The bureau is already swamped with work. Four thousand employes were added by the bureau to take care of the victory tax deductions and a great many more will be needed by Sept. 1 when the big job of "pay-as-you-go" will start. The office of the collector of internal revenue now has 24,000 employes.

Officials estimated that 100,000,000 statements of tax withholdings by employers will be received in a year and these will have to be checked against the returns and declarations of the taxpayers.

HIT BY FIRE

Cafe on South Park Street Damaged By Blaze.

Fire which was confined to the basement of the Crescent cafe at 22 South Park street last night caused minor damage to the main restaurant room and forced closing of a part of the establishment today.

Believed to have been started by spontaneous combustion, the flames were soon brought under control by firemen from Central station, but water and smoke spread damage to the first floor of the building. The fire was discovered shortly before 7:30 p. m.

Because of the damage to furnishings and refrigeration equipment, only the front part of the cafe was being used today.

Defense Leaders To Hear Of Proper Canning Methods

Civilian defense zone, sector, and block leaders in Mansfield and Madison township will receive instruction in the proper methods of preserving fruits and vegetables at a meeting at 9:30 a. m. Tuesday in the John Simpson junior high school auditorium.

There will be demonstrations of ways to can and dehydrate foods and a motion picture will supplement the talks.

Following the meeting, leaders in the OCD war services in the city and township will conduct a survey of homes to determine the number of women interested in community canning centers in August.

The centers will be opened in schools in the areas where there is sufficient interest, Mrs. John Pierce, war services chairman, said. A small charge would be made for the use of the pressure cookers at the centers.

Information obtained by the block leaders in their home survey must be turned in to the OCD office in the city building by July 27 to enable the office to arrange for the canning centers by early August, Mrs. Pierce said.

MANSFIELD JAC MEMBER HEADS STATE GROUP

Myers Named Chairman of Safety Committee; Youth Center Discussed.

Robert Myers of the Mansfield Junior Association of Commerce, was named chairman of the state safety committee at the board of directors meeting in Columbus Sunday.

Officers of the local chamber who attended the "officers' training school" in connection with the board of directors meeting were Roscoe McGinty, chairman of the local board of directors; James Morgan, vice-president; Lowell Moore, secretary; Robert LaFever, treasurer; Ed Balyeat, president and Myers, member of the Ohio board of directors.

By special request the Mansfield officers met with officers of junior chambers which have put reception centers to discuss their plans for a teen-age recreation center.

Meanwhile today President Balyeat announced that the J. A. C. has two possible locations for the center under consideration. One the basement of the Gardner apartments, is 20 feet by 90 feet with a floor especially constructed for dancing. The other is the upper floor of the Purdy building offered by the owner last Friday. This site has a dance floor 40 feet square, separate lounge, rest rooms, and office space. Directors stated they would immediately investigate all angles of the building and request Fire Chief Seeburger to inspect the fire escape facilities. They said considerable remodeling and decorating would be necessary.

Officers are planning a meeting Thursday evening in the Chamber of Commerce rooms to consider all aspects of the recreation center project and the juvenile delinquency problem. Other interested organizations and the general public are invited to attend the meeting

TRIAL OPENS IN STABBING CASE

Defendant, Accused of First Degree Manslaughter, Waives Jury Trial.

Trial of Thelma King, charged with first degree manslaughter in the fatal stabbing of George Wilson May 10, opened today in common pleas court before Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch.

Accused of stabbing Wilson during a quarrel at the home on Marshall avenue which the couple shared, the defendant has waived trial by jury.

In his opening statement, Prosecutor John C. O'Donnell told the court he would prove the defendant guilty of "unlawfully killing another without malice."

George W. Biddle, counsel for defense, said he would prove that Thelma King committed the stabbing in self-defense, that she was in fear of bodily harm and of her life. He said he would present evidence to show that Wilson had on three other occastions hit the defendant over the head with a poker, a chair and a wine bottle.

At the request of defense counsel, the court adjourned for half an hour to inspect the scene of the crime at 376 Marshall avenue.

First Day To Register For Nursery Schools Failing To Bring Response.

A call for registrations for two prospective nursery schools in Mansfield for the children of war workers had failed to bring a single applicant early this afternoon, it was reported at the office of Supt. of Schools W. L. Miller.

The registration period opened today at the superintendent's office and will continue from 1 to 4 p. m. daily through Friday.

The nursery school units, made possible by a recent $19,215 federal allocation, are scheduled for the Carpenter and West Fifth street schools if enough parents register their children to make the project worthwhile.

Children from two to six years old would be cared for in the nurseries during the day at a charge of 50 cents per child per day.

Supt. Miller said a minimum of 20 children per school will be necessary to make the project pay its way.

Sleep's Easy In New Allied Landing Barge

Here you are admitted at an African port into the troop-hold of an Allied landing-ship tank, commonly known as an LST. Born of the current war, the LSTs are invasion barges so shallow of draft that enemy torpedoes find them hard to hit and so roomy that, though every inch is used, invasion troops still have plenty of room for overnight sleep. SMALL ADVANCE RULES OPENING MARKET ACTION

Armament Needs Extinguish Hope of Civilian Steel Use This Year.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Small fractional advances ruled early transactions in today's stock market.

On the upside at a quiet opening were U. S. Steel, North American, General Electric, Chrysler, Southern Railway, Standard Oil (N.J.), Goodrich, Yellow Truck and Radio Corp.

Boardrooms studied the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said hopes that may have been entertained of additional metal being available this year for civilian use had been extinguished by the heavy load imposed on mills for armament purposes. Some plate mills, it was added, now are booked solidly for the remainder of 1943 and it was likely by the end of July all would be.

CHICAGO—(AP)—Grains opened fractionally lower in a quiet trade today. Hedging appeared in wheat against weekend arrivals at terminal markets.

Wheat started unchanged at ⅜ lower, September $1.44¼-⅝, and rye was ⅝ to ¾ lower, September $1.06½.

U. S. TREASURY REPORT

WASHINGTON—The treasury balance July 16 was $10,111,098,489.91.

THEATERS

Gave His Best.

Roque Espiritu, young Filipino actor, needed no urging to give his best performance when playing in battle scenes for M. G. M.'s "Bataan," now showing at the Ohio. As a Philippine scout attached to an expendable patrol of U. S. troops, Roque died beating off a Jap attack. Roque's performance was heightened by the fact that his son and daughter are still in the Philippines. The Filipino actor was in the United States at the outbreak of war and was unable to get home. Robert Taylor plays the top role in "Bataan." The picture, it is reported, shows exactly how the Americans fought to defend the tiny island.

Stage Door Canteen.

"Stage Door Canteen" is now in its tenth day in Mansfield, the star-studded production playing at the Madison after a successful run at the Ohio. Cheryl Walker and William Terry are seen in the top roles. Terry plays the part of a soldier about to be sent overseas and Miss Walker is cast as a hostess in the canteen. The picture combines comedy with drama. George Jessel, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Ray Bolger, Gypsy Rose Lee, Harpo Marx, Ed Wynn and Ned Sparks furnish plenty of laughs while several sequences of the picture are real "tear jerkers." The picture ends tomorrow.

Ends Today.

"Happy Go Lucky," Paramount's musical comedy, ends a three-day run at the Ritz today. Mary Martin, Dick Powell, Betty Hutton, Eddie Bracken and Rudy Vallee are seen in the top roles. The five stars sing and make merry to the tune of five songs, four of which have become "hits." They are "Let's Get Lost," "Murder, He Says," "The Fuddy Duddy Watchmaker" and "Happy Go Lucky." Other Ritz attraction is "The Law Rides Again," featuring Ken Maynard and Hoot Gibson.

Power of Press.

"Power of the Press," now at the Park, is a story of the operations of a big town newspaper. Guy Kibbee is seen in the top role with Lee Tracy, Otto Kruger, Victor Jory, Larry Parks, Rex Williams, Frank Sully, Don Beddoe, Douglas Leavitt and Minor Watson in the supporting cast. Kibbee inherits the controlling interest in the paper and leaves his small town paper to become publisher. Other Park film is "The Crystal Ball."

SCORZA MAKES FRANTIC APPEAL

Declares Allies Will Loot Italy and Dismember It If They Win.

victorious, what fate would befall us? The nation would be broken up; the people would be reduced to a mass of serfs and most of them would fall under the Russian whip.

"The stronger would be sent to toil in the Ural mines and in the steppes; the less strong would raise flowers for the ladies or would sketch ceramics for English baronets. The sacked museum, the schools subjected to the whim of the conquerors; the idle arsenals, the ports deserted of our ships; the closed factories, the abandoned fields would bear witness."

It was generally agreed by most of the press that Scorza's speech could be taken as Fascism's answer to the unconditional surrender demand but it was also seen as an indication that Fascist leaders were deeply concerned over the situation within Italy.

Italy Bids For Peace Guarantees

LONDON—(INS)—A Rome dispatch today to the Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter, carried under the headline—"Italy Advertises For Peace Guarantees"—indicated Italy would quit the war if more explicit peace conditions were drawn up by the Allies and backed by "the proper guarantees."

The dispatch, passed by Italian censors, significantly was printed on the day Rome was bombed for the first time in World War II.

GOP Group Sets Sights On Quick Post-War Plans

lican post-war policy association, a self-described "pressure group" designed to persuade the Republican national committee and Republican congressmen to endorse immediately a program of post-war world collaboration.

The senator spoke after national association Chairman Deneen A. Watson, Chicago lawyer, had opened the show with a request that he be authorized to ask Republican national committee Chairman Harrison E. Spangler for quick action on post-war policy matters.

Watson estimated that 300 delegates were here for the conference from the New England States, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and West Virginia.

Austin applauded the association's objectives and warned the conferees against the Republican nationalist revival organization in the mid-west which, he said, was "claiming the Republican party as the nationalist party in American politics." That was evidence, he said, that "isolationism lurks here and there."

Austin, and other speakers all insisted upon prosecution of the war to complete victory. He said the three major Axis nations and governments should be disarmed, their armed forces disorganized and their nations and governments forbidden to manufacture implements of war. He proposed punishment for Axis leaders and armed occupation of their countries.

Watson proposed a four-point program as a basis for immediate international policy decisions:

1. Decisive defeat of Axis nations.

2. Agreement among the United Nations before the war ends on general terms of the peace settlement and the outlines of the post war world.

3. Realization that world peace must rest securely upon the preponderant power of the United Nations, particularly, the United States, China, Russia and Great Britain.

4. Preparation now for the problems of disease, civil disorder, famine and social insecurity which will arise when the over-all fighting ceases.

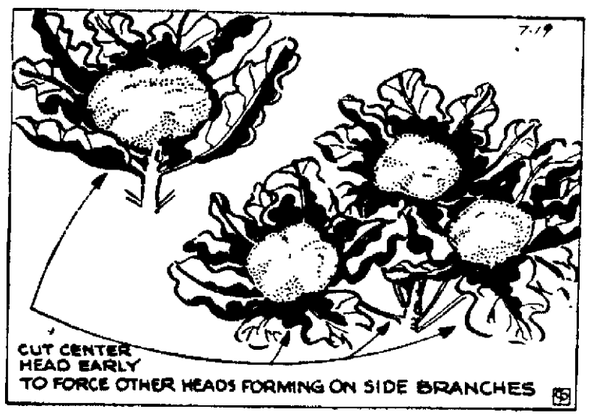
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Broccoli—A Valuable Addition to Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Asso.

Broccoli is an excellent vegetable which is becoming better known among Americans now that vitamins are playing such an important part in our daily nutritional requirements. Broccoli is an excellent source of vitamins A, B1, B2 and C.

Broccoli is an erect growing plant which forms a center head first. As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, this cluster of green flower buds (or that is what it really is) should be cut out as soon as it is ready and large enough for table use. The cutting out of the center head causes the side shoots of the plant to throw out numerous edible flower heads, as illustrated. These in turn should be cut off and used, for this will keep the plant growing and producing many more heads up to the time of freezing weather.

When young plants are placed in the garden they should be kept well cultivated, but later, as the plants develop the roots spread out in all directions and are close to the surface. Then cultivation should only be of the shallow type and farther away from the plants so as not to disturb the root systems.

A feeding of fertilizer can be given just as the heads of broccoli begin to develop.

NEW DELAY SEEN IN OAKES CASE

Hearing Postponed As Police Investigate New Angles.

NASSAU, Bahamas — (INS) — Because police were still investigating "new angles" to the July 8 murder of Sir Harry Oakes, multi-millionaire American-born baronet, the preliminary hearing today of his son-in-law, Count Alfred De Marigny, who is held in connection with the crime, appeared likely to be adjourned a second time.

Several crown witnesses, recalled for further questioning, were closeted behind carefully guarded doors with Capt. E. W. Melchen, Miami homicide bureau chief, who declared he wants to review all signed statements and check them against his own notes taken at the time of the original questioning a week ago.

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

ALLIED COMMAND POST, North Africa—(By Wireless)—During a big historic event such as the invasion of Sicily it might be supposed that the commanding general would be clanking his weight around. After all this is a great moment in history because the Allies at last are carrying the war to Europe.

Furthermore, this is a gigantic operation with 3,000 ships involved and it might be expected that the commanding general would be jumping all over the place issuing orders right and left.

Clapper

But General Eisenhower returned from the beaches of Sicily looking as if he had just come from a ball game which broke right for the home team. He was more like a big industrial executive who, on the day when the plant is breaking production records, will show visitors around the mill as if he had nothing else to do.

The fact is, Eisenhower's main work was done weeks and months ago. When the time came for the move to Sicily everything that he could do about the invasion had already been done and the rest was in the hands of others. Two weeks before the attack I saw him one afternoon and he talked for nearly two hours, with his time seemingly completely clear as probably it was because at that late date all plans were made.

The harbor outside his window was crowded with transports and with troops assembling for loading. If Eisenhower, weeks before, had overlooked something it was too late now. He was like the coach who had done all he could for the team and had to sit, waiting to see what happened.

Eisenhower went over to the beaches, not to direct operations, but to welcome the Canadians who were in action under him for the first time, also to call on various American generals conducting operations, to get a look at the end product of his months of hard work on infinite details and, finally, to give his aide, Naval Commander Harry Butcher, an opportunity to take two rolls of snapshots for their scrap books.

At this stage, General Eisenhower was watching chiefly for deficiencies in planning which can be corrected for future actions, noting messages that came in reporting the capture of new places, hearing reports of subordinates, attending to complaints. He hates the standard communique phrase "according to plan" but yet that's about the way it has been going thus far.

So instead of seeing a dust-covered, motorized version of General Grant at Shiloh, you see Eisenhower in neat shirtsleeves, with just one dudish touch—he wears a regulation army necktie whereas everyone else in this area keeps their shirt collars open, even generals at dinner.

Air force men, up to and including General Tooey Spaatz, keep their sleeves rolled up which you won't find authorized in the regulations. Except for that necktie touch, Eisenhower is informal, very much Kansas folks, although he's had occasion before this to make it clear who's boss.

Eisenhower doesn't seem to be a person who runs war by intuition. From what an outsider can observe it seems as if the Allied invasion was the result of slide rule planning, more like a big engineering job than fiction story war. Yet as it comes out there has been nothing more spectacular in history than this gigantic armada landing a mechanized army on the ancient shores of Sicily.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK—Let us consider the cases of two American citizens named Spelvin, one colored, the other white.

The colored Spelvin derived his name from that of the old southern family for which his forebears slaved and the white Spelvin is a descendant of the family who also has to work for his living.

The colored Spelvin applies for a job at a war plant and the employer, whose own son is over in Africa or the southwest Pacific area, wants to put him to work not only because he believes in a fair opportunity for one and all on the basis of ability and other merit but also because he is thinking of that boy and his country. He wants to win the war and hold down the casualties in the winning of it, and he would feel guilty if, by discriminating against any worthy man, whatever his race or religion, he should retard to an infinitesimal degree, the production of the weapons which his son needs. But he discovers that some of the white workmen in the plant have a prejudice against colored Americans and will quit him if he hires the colored Spelvin, so he has to pass him up, even though the colored man's son is a soldier in the same theater with his own son.

Pegler

About the same time, the white Mr Spelvin applies for a job. He, too, is a very desirable man, efficient, industrious, conscientious, intelligent and all that, and he has a son fighting in the same general region with the other two. The employer would be glad to put him to work at once but before the interview is over he says that, of course, Mr. Spelvin realizes that his government requires him to join the union which has been given a job-monopoly in the plant and the right to collect a tax on his income in addition to other moneys.

The white Mr. Spelvin says he understands no such thing, and that he will be damned if he will join, so the employer regretfully turns him away but with inward admiration for the strength of character and principle which sustain him in this decision, even though his job, also, needs weapons and ammunition and Mr. Spelvin, also, loves his country, wants to help and must support his family.

At this point an organization enters the situation and presents the case of the colored Mr. Spelvin to a government agency which says that it is outrageous and un-American to ostracize the colored brother in this arbitrary way, because equality of opportunity is one of the things that we are fighting for.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt also hears of the case and goes into action and writes a little essay deploring man's inhumanity to man. So, presently, after some pulling and hauling, the colored Spelvin gets on the payroll and does a very creditable job.

But there is no organization to fight the case of the white Spelvin and, although the impairment of the war effort by reason of his exclusion is just as bad and his family suffers from hunger and squalor and cold, Mrs. Roosevelt is indifferent. In fact her attitude is a little worse than indifference, because she has expressed her belief all workers should join unions, has actively helped unions and has loudly refrained from deploring discrimination against nonjoiners.

They may starve and their families, too, for all that Mrs. Roosevelt has ever done to protect them from arbitrary discrimination and if Mr. Spelvin is so stuck on his principle that goes to show that he is undemocratic and thus un-American.

Well, Mr. Spelvin is just that firm in his principle, so he and the family do go hungry and when winter comes they are cold and they live in a dump. It isn't so much that he begrudged the money to the union, although the initiation fee of $50 and the year's dues, assessments and contributions arbitrarily taken from him, amounting to $110 more, would buy a right smart amount of groceries and shoes for the family.

But, being a very stout American, he insists that his government has no right to authorize any private club or society to make him join, war or no war, government contract or private enterprise. He wouldn't join under compulsion backed by his government, because that is his principle. Doesn't anyone respect principle any more?

The white Spelvins get hungrier and hungrier and one night Mrs. Spelvin is reading an old paper and comes to Mrs. Roosevelt's column and tells the old man that she sees where Mrs. R. takes a very firm stand against discrimination in employment and her heart bleeds for human beings who are thus kept in want and wretchedness and denied a fair opportunity.

"Well, that certainly is fine of her," Mr Spelvin said. "I wish we were human beings too, instead of just Americans."

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

(Note: Walt Disney's Mickey Mouse is one of my favorite characters and so is Walt Disney. These wartime days, Walt has more on his mind than Donald and Pluto and the Seven Dwarfs—he tells you about it here.—D. K.)

Walt Disney Says—

IT DOESN'T seem possible that a year has elapsed since I last wrote in this space, but then space is being so rapidly compressed these days that we almost forget about time entirely.

We literally have been up in the air here for the last twelve months with the training pictures we have been making for the armed forces and filming Major Alexander P. de Seversky's prophetic story, "Victory Through Air Power."

Kilgallen

I know a lot of people are wondering how we happened to produce this story. But from top to bottom I believe we have one of the most air-minded groups in the United States right in our studio. From the time my brother, Roy, and myself ran nearly two miles to see Calbraith P. Rogers land in Swope park Kansas City on a leg of his transcontinental flight back in 1913 which took him 45 days—I have been interested in flying myself. If Mickey Mouse had not stuck his big ears into my affairs I undoubtedly would have had some association with the aviation industry today. Rogers, incidentally, was so impressed with the airplane as a space destroyer that he predicted a flight across the United States ultimately would be made in 30 days.

Our interest in 'Victory Through Air Power' was rooted in our faith that the way to win the war in the shortest possible time with the minimum loss of life, is through the thoroughly sound strategic and tactical air power reasoning of Major Seversky.

If was a definite challenge to our medium to bring this story to the screen, but anytime you think of laws and rules in connection with the airplane or air power, you find that such laws were made only to be broken. We had to violate a cardinal law of picture making that "Boy Meets Girl" or 'Joe Meets Joe," in filming "Victory Through Air Power."

But if the Wright brothers had subscribed to a clipping bureau and read what scientists thought of their chances to conquer the air, the historic flight at Kitty Hawk probably never would have been made.

* * *

We found in researching for 'Victory Through Air Power" that there definitely is such a thing as too much education and not enough knowledge. One of the worlds foremost scientists, not more than two months prior to the Wright Brothers' historic flight, said man never would fly. And why? Because if he ever got off the ground he wouldn't dare stop because he would fall a dead mass once his speed started to slacken.

Still the law of gravitation was circumvented.

Which recalls that when I was in France in 1918, it was law that only accredited pilots could fly in French combat planes. But fifty francs which I had saved up for a trip to Paris after the armistice made a French aviation mechanic wink at the law and I had my thirst to fly satisfied for the first time, as a stowaway in a dual-motored observation plane. My lust for flying was chilled somewhat when I visited the Smithsonian Institute and saw a duplicate of the ship in which I had made my first flight. It was put together with bamboo and tape it seemed, and just the thought that I had gone up several thousand feet in such a contraption sent a shudder up and down my spine. What a wonderful thing is youth!

BEIGHTLER SAYS PEACE TO MEAN NEW SACRIFICES

Declares Nation Must Hold Vital Bases For Own Defense, Stay Armed.

(By United Press)

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC—Victory will not mean the end to the duties and responsibilities of the American soldier, but only continued sacrifices will insure lasting peace, Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler of Columbus, O., warned recently.

Speaking to several thousand soldiers at a South Pacific base, Gen. Beightler, a division commander, said there must be no return of the era which followed the armistice of the first World war.

"You will have to resist the temptation to do what every American soldier has done on the day of victory in wars past," Gen. Beightler said. "Armistice day to him became a headlong rush to the home fireside, the pipe and the slippers, and the beginning of the fried chicken era. The quicker he got his exercise with his golf clubs instead of trench shovels, the better.

"And if you do yield to that temptation, I shall be the last man to blame you. It is an old American custom."

But that custom must be broken, he said, because it is a cause of the present war.

Gen. Beightler, commander of a division, said that after the last war our enemies found only the "bitter fruits" of the vanquished and never took off their uniforms "figuratively speaking" while Americans learned the "Charleston and argued about the merits of a V-eight over a straight eight."

Our enemies were planning and building for the present war, Gen. Beightler continued, and the result was a bitter jolt to Americans. Lasting peace, therefore, will be made possible only through continued sacrifices.

"To achieve real peace Americans must be willing to accept and carry out the world leadership that our victory in this war will thrust upon us," he said. "We must prepare to take strong and active measures to guarantee world-peace. We must never again allow our military and naval forces to deteriorate to the place where we shall be caught as we were this time. We must prevent any strategic bases from falling into the hands of would-be conquerors of the world.

"We must establish and hold vital bases for our own defense. We must understand that we shall require an army and navy much larger than any we have ever had in peace-time. Eternal vigilance against aggressions is the only guarantee that will prevent a recurrence of this kind of war."

CONFECTIONER KILLS YOUTH

Shoots Columbus Boy, 19, as He Tried To Pry Screen From Window.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS— Columbus police today had on record the death of William Steven Palich, 19, who was shot and killed early yesterday by John A. Shipley, 60, operator of a confectionery.

Shipley told police he shot the boy, whom he caught prying up a heavy steel window screen on a back window, when Palich ignored his command to halt.

Palich dropped unconscious, after taking a few steps, with a bullet through his left lung just above the heart. Police rushed him to University hospital but he was dead upon arrival, they said.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Palich, the boy had been arrested four times since 1939, police records show. Once he was slated for 'investigation of burglary," twice for "investigation," and one March 3, 1943, he was convicted of assault and battery and placed on a year's probation by municipal court.

According to the parents, Palich a boilermaker's helper at the Columbus Pennsylvania railroad shops, was to have reported for induction into the armed forces next Friday.

Besides the parents, a brother, Pvt. Charles B. Palich, jr, stationed at Pomona, Calif., and a sister, Mrs. Hayward Newcomb, survive.

You may now have your plates reconditioned—not your upper and lower plates but your back and front plates. The Ohio legislature has passed a bill permitting motorists to recondition their auto license plates. Deputy Registrar Jack Berger of the Richland County Auto Club sees the measure as a great boon to Mansfield police, the sheriff and state highway patrolmen. He said the 1942 plates are becoming so worn as to be illegible and the law requires the rear plate to be legible for a distance of 50 feet. A permit from the police department, state patrol or the sheriff's office authorizes the motorist to repaint his license plates so that it may be clearly seen.

An estimate that Mansfield's rat population is close to the 40,000 mark, about one for every person in the city, is a conservative figure, Dr. W. B. Wild, city-county health commissioner, had decided today after visiting some of the city's rodent infested sections. The commissioner's trip of inspection followed a talk on rodent control here last week by George Dyer, U. S. department of interior employe in charge of rodent extermination. Dr. Wild said Mansfielders will be wasting their time killing rats until homes and business buildings are made rat-proof.

Comments on its becoming appearance flew around the bank today, but Mr. Ackerman wasn't much impressed. He had handy in his desk drawer a picture of himself with what he calls a "real" mustache. It was made, he says, when he was 37—almost 50 years ago—and he not only had a mustache but a generous beard, of the type that was popular in those days.

OHIOAN RESCUES 3 BIG PLANES

Leads Army Transports Safely To Landing Field In South Pacific.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Three army transport airplanes heavily loaded with passengers and supplies were saved from destruction during a storm in the south Pacific by First Lieut. Franklin M. Rizer, of Syracuse, O., United States army air forces pilot, who guided them safely into an auxiliary field, the war department has been informed.

The three planes became lost in a heavy rainstorm and were unable to reach their destination. They tried to reach an auxiliary field surrounded by mountains and closed in by rain and fog, but were not successful as visibility was zero.

Lieut. Rizer, who had just landed at the field, heard of the planes and immediately took off on his own initiative to find them. He succeeded in locating the planes and one by one led them safely in to the field. Because of the danger involved he refused the services of an observer who offered to fly with him.

The air medal has been presented to him for the flight. Lieut. Rizer, a fighter pilot who has seen action in the Solomons, is the son of Daniel Rizer, of Syracuse. He was graduated from the army air corps advanced flying school at Kelly field, Texas, on Dec. 12, 1941, and has been overseas since February, 1942.

LEWIS, UNION MEET TO MAP NEW STRATEGY

Face Dilemma as Anti-Strike Bill Demands Return of Mines To Owners.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—John L. Lewis meets with the United Mine Workers' policy committee today to define union strategy for the next phase of their controversy with the administration and the coal operators.

The union must decide whether it will cling to its present policy in the face of administration proposals to return government-operated mines to the operators under terms of the Smith-Connally anti-strike law. After the miners resumed work on condition that the government retain the mines, congress enacted that law with a provision that the government must relinquish control of seized properties within 60 days after production returns to normal.

UMW officials were expected to discuss the outlook for renewed contract negotiations, perhaps first with operators outside the Appalachian area. Any contract acceptable to the union probably would provide for settlement of the miners' claim for underground travel pay.

An agreement still would be subject to approval of the War Labor Board, whose decision in the dispute was rejected by the UMW last month. If the UMW should attempt to settle the travel pay issue without court action, the board would demand evidence that the settlement was justified under terms of the wage-hour law.

A union spokesman said the policy committee probably would not discuss tomorrow's negotiations for UMW re-affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. The union convention last year authorized international officials to take whatever action they thought was advisable.

Lewis meets tomorrow with an AFL committee composed of Daniel J. Tobin, president of the teamsters; George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, and Matthew Woll, president of the photo engravers. The committee was assigned to work out plans for the return of the UMW and to report back to the AFL executive council meeting at Chicago next month.

There appeared little doubt that the committee would favor the miners' return, inasmuch as both Tobin and Woll are on record in support of the action.

While the miners' officials canvass the possibility of reaching a new wage agreement for the soft coal industry, negotiations for the anthracite industry will continue here.

Yanks, Canadians Advance In Central Sicily, Threaten Key City of Enna.

terranean islands and were closing in to yank out two of its biggest props—Catania on the east coast and Enna, the defense key in the central area of the island.

British troops were slowly crushing powerful enemy armored strength, and plunged deep across the plain of Catania after the heaviest battle of the Sicilian campaign.

On other world battlefronts:

RUSSIA: The Red army pounded closer to Orel, reaching the approaches to that heavily-defended German base, after scoring another four mile gain yesterday, Moscow reported. It said scores of German tanks and 5,000 enemy troops were destroyed. Just how close the three Russian columns driving in from the north, east and south were to the city was not clear, however

PACIFIC: Costly new blows were struck by U. S. sea and air forces; nearly 200 Allied planes sank seven Japanese ships and downed 49 enemy planes in a raid Saturday on the Buin-Faisi harbor on Bougainville island, and a fleet nearly as strong struck again Sunday, sinking one and damaging three more ships, besides bagging 13 more planes.

American warships threw back two destroyer flotillas seeking to bring supplies to besieged Japanese at Munda on New Georgia island, probably sinking one, ground troops at Munda were closing in on the airdrome area there In New Guinea there was sharp but small-scale fighting, and two and possibly six Japanese planes were downed in aerial combat.

AIR WAR: Stabbing at the Abbeville airdrome in France and shipping off the Dutch coasts, RAF bombers and fighters last night knocked down eight German planes and damaged two Axis ships. Eight British planes were lost These attacks followed raids on Nazi communications Saturday night by the RAF and a daylight raid Saturday by U. S Flying Fortresses on Amsterdam

SEA WAR. The Germans broadcast the unsubstantiated announcement that their submarines so far in July had sunk 45 Allied ships.

The bombs were loosed over Rome at 11:15 a. m. (5:15 a. m., Eastern War Time) in a raid timed despite the danger, in full daylight for accuracy. It thus respected President Roosevelt's pledge to Pope Pius XII that every precaution would be taken to avoid damage to religious property.

Allied heavy and medium bombers made the assault, with the rail yards the principal tagret since they "are of the greatest importance to the Axis war effort and in particular for the movement of German troops."

The leaflets spread over the city of 900,000 population before the raid declared that the Allies targets could be military objectives . . . being used for the sole interest of the Germans."

The Allies command disclosed the raid within 15 minutes after the bombs tumbled from the planes—an unprecedented step taken to forestall Axis propaganda by presenting first a full explanation of the necessity of the attack and its targets.

It had long been debated whether Rome would be bombed. The Allies pointed to its military importance—industries, communications and airfields—and on June 30 British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden said the Italian capital would be bombed "if the course of the war should render such action necessary."

The great Allied air arm punished other objectives, following up a 500-plane attack upon Naples Saturday in the heaviest air attack of the Mediterranean war. Allied bombers from the Middle East hit rail and port facilities in Reggio Calabria across from Messina Saturday night.

The Algiers radio said Axis headquarters in Sicily had been transferred to Reggio Calabria.

Rome Airfields Also Bombed, Report

LONDON—(INS)—Scanty information reaching London today indicated that Allied bombers, in addition to attacking the Rome railroad marshalling yards, also struck at airfields eight and one-half miles southeast of the center of the capital.

Air circles pointed out that while the airmen were carefully trained to insure as far as humanely possible that targets hit would be confined to military objectives, interception by enemy fighters or ground fire may have resulted in disturbing the bombing pattern.

Threaten Nazis With Trap at Orel

MOSCOW—(UP)—Russian armored forces probing deep into the hedgehog defenses of Orel, made scythe-like swipes at the rear of several big German units today, threatening thousands of troops with encirclement and annihilation.

Front reports of slow but steady Soviet advances tightening a steel band against the Orel salient said advanced elements were racing on ahead to slice in behind German pockets of resistance and threaten their retreat route.

Italian Shells Add To Havoc In Rome

BERN, Switzerland—(AP)— Unconfirmed reports from Italy said today that Italian anti-aircraft shells which failed to explode until they hit the ground added to the damage caused today by the allied bombing of Rome.

Up to early afternoon there was no Italian comment on the Rome bombing except the brief reference in the high command communique to the attack and the fact that damage had not yet been ascertained.

Rome has been a mecca for Italians leaving the industrial north and the agricultural south because of allied attack and the population, little more than 1,500,000 a year ago, had swelled to perhaps 2,500,000.

Senators Feel Rome Gets Just Deserts

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— Senators commenting on the bombing of Rome today took the position that Italy merely got what must be expected in wartime.

They also expressed satisfaction that precautions were taken to avoid damaging shrines of religion and antiquity.

Sen. Harley M. Kilgore, D., W. Va., said "There is no reason why, if Rome continues to be military headquarters, it should have special protection."

"We warned Italy months ago to demilitarize Rome," he added. "An attack on Rome does not constitute an attack on Vatican City. If bombs were aimed at the Vatican, that would be reprehensible.

"The Fascists have been hiding behind churches in the Italian war and they can be expected to stir up dissension on that ground. Other cities have been bombed by these gentlemen who, in the last few months, have become so religious."

Sen. Harold H. Burton, R., O., said, "I am glad our intention to bomb military objectives is proceeding right ahead Rome has many military installations which it has no doubt become necessary to bomb. I think it was a wise step for our air force to give the Italian people warning that military objectives in Rome would be bombed, and I am sure they would understand."

Pilots Pick Out Rome Targets Easily

CAIRO — (AP) — Pilots who bombed Rome today said after returning to their North African bases that they had no difficulty in finding their military targets in the clear morning sunshine because of the unusually large number of landmarks which dot the Italian capital, according to first reports reaching Cairo.

They picked up the snake-like Tiber river outside Rome and followed it into the city.

The pilots said they saw evidence that the Italians already had taken steps to protect some of Rome's historic monuments. Columns of the Trojan Arch of Titus and the beautiful Cascades ornamented by the sculptures of Bernini had been encased in thick concrete, they said.

company said, was that the Mansfield unit had learned their job well.

"I was highly pleased with the company's showing," Bierly said. "To the man they did a good job and I'm sure they will be able to cope with any emergency should they be called for duty."

Capt. Bierly said the men, although not trained daily as are soldiers in the army, stood up well on maneuvers which kept the 50 members on the jump from daylight until dusk daily.

Only one casualty was reported. Capt. Bierly said Cpl. Ralph McClead pulled a tendon in his leg during a stimulated attack on enemy forces last Friday night.

On the problem the men were subject to "enemy" fire and gas attack over what Bierly described as "difficult terrain." The maneuvers were held in Zaleski state forest, the terrain of which is similar to that of Mohican state park.

YANKS CAPTURE CALTIGIRONE

but his first shot missed and the tank swung its 75 around at Wilson. For a few brief seconds, the Americans and the Germans were staring down the barrels of each other's guns

"Then we fired simultaneously," Wilson recounted "There was a terrific flash and explosion half way between us. The only way I can explain it is that the two shells must have collided in midair. We beat the Heinies to the second shot, which disabled their tank as they tried to run away."

He said its second shot was fired by Sgt. Sherman Jones of Oklahoma. "When daylight came," Wilson said, "I discovered that Jones had fired miraculously through the barrel of the tank's .75, exploding the ammunition and burning the tank."

While this was going on, Lieut. Jonathan Baker of New Brunswick, N. J., got three mortars into action. They knocked out a second enemy tank and then hit a gasoline tank in the woods, which exploded several hundred stacked 88mm shells.

During the three-hour fight that followed, the Nazis counter-attacked twice, their tanks followed by infantry, but were repulsed each time in a matter of minutes by the Americans' mortars, one of which killed an enemy officer in a tank at 400 yards.

The retreat of the Germans left the road to Caltigirone open. As we entered the town we found eight abandoned Italian tankettes.

On the western flank of the Sicilian front, long lines of docile prisoners jammed roads and fields, lightly guarded, as they marched from Agrigento to Porto Empedocle. American forces which captured both towns found the railroad link between the two places undamaged but many land mines strewn in their path.

Civilians said Italian troops had used burial niches near a famous Greek-built temple as foxholes during the fighting.

In Porto Empedocle, the balconies of a four-story hotel used as a prison by the enemy were jammed with German and Italian prisoners, including some sailors.

A captured Italian general, who had fought in an American battalion during the last war, astounded the Americans by declaring they knew more about Italian forces in Sicily than he did.

and they represent an abdication of power by the national OPA office. . . ."

Coincident with these statements came a new warning from the petroleum war council—saying that although oil transportation difficulties are being met at last, an alarming shortage of gasoline itself is now developing.

The council listed four reasons for the shortage.

1. Failure of the government to increase the price of crude oil.

2. Material and manpower difficulty affecting the drilling of oil wells.

3. The need to manufacture fuel oil for homes, war plants and the merchant marine and navy, in preference to gasoline.

4. The tremendous military demands for petroleum.

The new move was instituted on the gasoline rationing front today. The OPA amended its regulations to permit "B," "C," "E" and "R" coupon holders to use them beyond the fixed period for which they were issued until they obtain renewals. At the same time, the OPA ruled that "B" books outside the northeastern shortage area will be issued for a fixed period of three months, rather than on a "time-tailored" basis.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, JULY 19, 1943.

Present response to the statement, "Man wants but little here below," would be, "Oh yeah!"

"Teen" is an old word meaning "troublesome"—which may account for difficulties with some youngsters in that age range.

And it wasn't so long ago that railroads were encouraging transcontinental travel by having a world fair at each end of the line.

There Is No 'Right To Strike' Now

TRANSPORTATION is so essential to winning the war that it is hard to understand how any body of men thus employed can justify themselves, even in their own minds, in hampering the movement of either war materials or war workers at such a time as this.

For three days last week Akron's public transportation system was thrown out of kilter by a strike of 400 street car and bus operators, to the great inconvenience of thousands of employes in war industries and to the detriment of production of vital war equipment.

A similar situation also developed in Detroit and while such handicaps to the national war effort can and will be overcome by the energy and patriotism of millions of other workers who stick to their jobs, that sort of lay-down cannot fail to have an irritating and depressing effect on persons who are victims of such conspiracies to enforce union demands in disregard of no-strike pledges and government orders.

In the Akron controversy the entire dispute over wages and working conditions was in the hands of the War Labor Board, with the company powerless to act in the matter without sanction by the board, which refused to consider the case while the men were on strike.

The whole thing gave the impression of being a hot-headed exhibition of so-called "personal liberty" rather than a carefully reached decision of patriotic American citizens interested in the welfare of their own community and concerned about their country and its fighting forces.

The actual "right" of small minorities to endanger, or even inconvenience, a majority of people AT ANY TIME may be seriously questioned. That any such "right" exists in time of war is obviously absurd.

Subsidies Do Not Reduce Costs

ONE of the greatest dangers that can follow price restrictions which do not allow a sufficient operating profit, is the idea that government loans or government subsidies can bridge the gap so that production may be continued and consumers furnished goods at less than the actual cost. The danger from this policy is that it opens the door for government ownership or control of industry and business.

Political pressure to force subsidies on producers and distributors, instead of permitting necessary price adjustments, could easily be part of a program to socialize American industry, while the public is lulled with the idea that such a palliative will hold down the cost of living. At the best it can do no more than take money out of one pocket and put it in another—costs are not reduced.

Petrillo and His Music Trust

ONE TROUBLE with James C. Petrillo and his tight little music union is that he seems to assume there is room for only a certain amount of music in this country, or only a certain number of people who will pay to hear it.

Then he himself undertakes to control the nation's music, not only regulating the amount but deciding who shall play it publicly and who shall not play it. And he pictures the situation by declaring, "we are not going to play at our own funeral any more." Meaning apparently that he and his pals are not going to tolerate any outside competition.

They insist on controlling and limiting the transcription business. Petrillo questions the jurisdiction of the War Labor Board in this field, and says the transcription industry "takes work away from thousands of musicians." In that position he virtually takes music away from millions of people.

It certainly seems to many of Mr. Petrillo's fellow-countrymen that he, and his organization are engaged in arbitrarily limiting the scope and freedom of music in this country, breaking the law and hurting the public, and also hurting the musicians themselves. There should be a great expansion of available music—not an arbitrary limitation. There is also something in the idea that a learned profession and a fine art like music do not exactly fit into the intended purposes of a labor union.

Wilson Descendant Carries On

WOODROW WILSON would have liked to take part in this war. Not only did he have plenty of fighting blood, but his whole nature would have revolted against Naziism and Tojoism.

Wilson is dead, and he left no sons. His grandson, however, Woodrow Wilson Sayre, has just been commissioned as a second lieutenant.

Somewhere in the war Lieut. Sayre may meet up with the fighting sons and grandsons of Wilson's great rival, Theodore Roosevelt. And the enmity of the former generation will be stilled as the descendants of both contestants fight in a common cause.

Patty Is a Persistent Redhead

THERE is no stopping a redhead. When, 18 months ago, Patty Berg was badly hurt in an automobile accident, they told her that she could never play golf again. For a girl who had won the women's national championship and now was making her living at the game, this was pretty hard.

Patty is redheaded as well as a golf devotee, and these are two classes of people whom it is no use to tell that they can't do what they want most to do. They go ahead and do them anyway, and this is what Patty did. She has just won the Women's Western Open tournament, in which she as a professional met the pick of the country, amateurs and professionals alike.

With this triumph to top off her civil career, Patty has put golf behind her and joined the marines. There she will find abundant market for her pluck and perseverance.

The stork seems to be doing everything possible to avert a manpower shortage in 1963.

Co-ordination of Allied Forces Explains Success of Offensives

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

DIVERS ELEMENTS go to make up the victory which the United Nations are forging from white-hot steel, and the masterful manner in which the Sicilian stronghold has been invaded emphasizes again that unprecedentedly unselfish Allied co-operation is the ranking reason for success.

Now please don't start writing to tell me of war theaters where Americans and British look down their noses at each other. I know about that from first-hand observation, and think it's too bad. But those cases seem to me to be exceptions to the rule, although I'm not so naive as to think all the spots of bother between our two countries have been rubbed out.

Taking it by and large there exists between the Allies a cordiality—and in many cases a real comradery — which wasn't even dreamed of in World war one.

Looking back at the last conflict, I recall turning my back on a British general and leaving the room, because he made a bitterly derogatory remark about a president of the United States.

On the other hand, as an American correspondent at British general headquarters in France I shall not soon forget the consternation caused when some American officers, fresh from the United States with newly arrived troops, announced in so many words that they knew how to make war and didn't want any advice from the British.

That sort of thing went on, with Americans, British, French and other Allies all contributing their share to the mess. The feeling ran from the lowest to the highest places, even resulting in shocking jealousies as to which ally should have supreme command in comoined operations.

And the civilian populations took a hand in it. Americans got mad because Britons called "elevators" "lifts," doggone it, and the English made snooty remarks about that awful Yankee nasal twang.

* * *

WHAT a change now! We are swapping our resources and our hospitality. There's no limit to the exchange; the lid is off. On the battle-fronts it's share and share alike, and the greatest soldiers of one country are happy to subordinate themselves to the command of a colleague from another nation—if that's best for the cause.

The reason for this remarkable change? Well, let's not get sentimental but just call it a horse-sense truce.

Perhaps the most potent factor in drawing us together was the mortal danger the Allies were in. We found ourselves fighting for our very survival against a barbaric enemy who had the initial advantage. Then, too, we have been smart enough to profit by the mistakes and bickerings of the last war.

Never before has there been such Allied co-operation, and consequent co-ordination of effort, in major military and naval operations. Not only is there co-ordination of the three fighting arms—air, land and sea—among the forces of the individual nations, but this co-ordination extends to the combined Allied forces. That is to say, all the services of each country in a given theater are at the call of the commander-in-chief, to intermingle as he chooses. It's one for all and all for one.

It was that willing unity which gave the Allies their victory in North Africa. It's the mainspring of that greatest of all amphibious operations which is being carried out in Sicily.

The fair progeny of this co-operation are many. One of the most striking developments of the war is the specialized training of the various branches like the commandos and paratroopers—in many cases a joint effort. History never has seen such well prepared forces go into battle as now are taking the field.

Many of the American, English, Canadian and French soldiers who fought their way up the beaches of Sicily from the landing barges, underwent months—and some of them years—of terrific training which was far more strenuous than the actual battle experiences.

They not only are physically perfect, but they know their jobs the way a pianist knows his keys. Thousands of these specialists received their training in an Allied camp.

The antithesis of this co-operation and co-ordination is the Axis imbroglio in Sicily. There Italians in some places are surrendering rather than fight for the hated Boche, and the Nazis are reported shooting their own Allies.

Canning Revival.

Though the art of canning never was lost—indeed, was still growing by leaps and bounds—wartime necessity is producing a revival of interest.

Housewives and husbands who hadn't canned anything for years because it had become too cheap and easy to buy what was needed at the nearest grocery store are going back to their younger days when everybody canned from necessity. They are reading up on new wrinkles, including chiefly the pressure-cooking method, and wondering where they can beg or borrow a pressure cooker.

Younger women, who had played with canning occasionally — sometimes unsuccessfully—are reading books, attending lectures, obtaining first-hand help from mothers, mothers-in-law and neighbors. Without exception, everybody is trying to get a little closer to the glow of self-sufficiency that used to come during inspection of long cupboard shelves in the cellar filled with rows of neatly filled jars.—Canton Repository.

Basic German-Italian Antagonism Leads to Hope of Axis Split-Up

WASHINGTON—With the invasion of Sicily, the question of whether Germany and Italy can pull together as a team now becomes something much more than a subject of amusing wisecracks. The basic hostility always existing between them—both the armies and the people—may now prove to be the fatal fault in the Axis.

United States diplomats and newsmen who lived interned in Italy until May, 1942, recall many an expression of Italian resentment against the Germans.

One night before the interned Americans left Rome to return to the U. S., a group of newspapermen, including Richard G. Massock of the Associated Press, visited a restaurant called Biblioteca, which had been a favorite haunt for most of them before the days of internment. The place was packed, largely with Germans, but when the head waiter recognized them, he hustled some diners off, to make room for his old American friends.

An Italian at the next table mumbled something about Germans intruding, whereupon AP's Massock spoke up, "We are not German!" "Excuse me," said the Italian, indicating clearly that to call a man a German is a fighting word.

This prompted another Italian to come to Massock, the first American he had seen for months. With an affectionate embrace he said, "Please give my kind regards to President Roosevelt!"

Black Hand Fifth Column.

UNITED STATES officials who know Sicily suspect there may have been a Sicilian fifth column operating in favor of the Allied invasion forces.

They base this suspicion on the fact that Sicily has always been an insurgent area—"the unreconstructed south" of Italy.

Sicily was the scene of the Mafia society, known in the United States as the Black Hand. It was more respectable there than here, however, being bitterly anti-Mussolini as the result of Il Duce's successful efforts to drive the society underground. Members of Mafia were the vigilantes of Sicily, undertaking to settle family feuds and personal problems outside the realm of the law.

The people of Sicily have always called themselves Sicilians, rather than Italians, and they were the last elements of Il Duce's empire to submit to Fascist domination.

These factors explain why some elements of the invading army were openly welcomed and others may have been secretly helped by the Sicilian people.

Flying Senators.

FOR Senator "Happy" Chandler of Kentucky the round-the-world trip of five senators investigating war conditions will be "unhappy."

A lot of things he figured on won't come off. In the first place, it will not be a pilgrimage of the senate military affairs committee alone, but a combination of military affairs and the more sober Truman and senate appropriations committees.

Second, the charming Kentuckian will not head the see-the-world probe. Sedate Senator Dick Russell of Georgia will be chairman instead.

Finally, there is the matter of funds. Originally "Happy" Chandler informed his colleagues that the senate military affairs committee had $3,000 to spend for the trip's expenses. Then one day Senator Chan Gurney of South Dakota, Republican member of the military affairs committee, tackled Republican members of the Truman committee in the cloak room.

"I would go a little slow on that $3,000 'Happy' Chandler promised, if I were you."

"Why?" asked Senator Brewster of Maine.

"Because you can't spend it outside the Western Hemisphere," replied Gurney. "The committee attached a proviso that not a cent could be spent for travel outside the Americas."

So since the flying senators will spend all their time in Africa, Asia, Australia, and Europe, the only chance they will have to spend "Unhappy" Chandler's committee money is when they are about to hop off from Miami or land at San Francisco.

However, Chandler may feel a little happier over the fact that the army is sending with him a high-ranking army doctor and old friend, Brig. Gen. Fred W. Rankin.

Actually, the investigating committee can and will do some important work in eliminating the same kind of friction among agencies at the war front that exists in Washington. The BEW, Jesse Jones's RFC, and Cordell Hull's diplomats unfortunately have not confined their rowing to Washington.

It will especially investigate reports that American-built airports in foreign countries will be turned over to those countries six months after the war; also the importance of using British oil reserves in the Middle East instead of draining U. S. supplies; and reports that civilian supplies in North Africa have been distributed through French-Fascist agencies.

So it is expected that Senators Russell, Brewster and Mead of New York will dig into these matters thoroughly. This should leave Chandler plenty of time to do the handshaking.

Note: When "Happy" Chandler and a sub-committee air-junketed to Alaska last summer he got $3,000 expense money from the senate military affairs committee and submitted a rough expense account of $2,900, despite the fact that most of his air travel was paid for by the government, and his sub-committee was frequently entertained at officers' clubs.

Meat Bootlegging.

THE meat shortage is giving rise to backyard slaughtering of cattle and hogs, which is about as safe and sanitary as production of prohibition "bath-tub gin."

War Food Administration is trying to force observation of the livestock permit order by making lurid examples of persons caught slaughtering without permit.

Lurid enough was the case of Theologus Grillis, operator of Grillis Grill, in Jackson, Miss., who ran short of pork to feed his customers, and solved his problem by slaughtering a hog that was diseased.

Grillis pleaded guilty, and was fined $5,000 for killing livestock without a permit. The meat was condemned and destroyed.

Government inspectors are out looking for other offenders.

HARVEST MOONLIGHT

THE MOONLIGHT shadows fall far westward from the maples on our lawn. The distorted image of our barn extends half through the corn field: the sky is clear and the slowly rising moon looks down upon the fields at harvest time.

Numerous wheat shocks, wet with rain and dew, stand dark and firm against the hills. The bottoms are thinly sheathed in fog. Meadows are greening stubble now, and new clover shoots glisten in the bright moonlight. Oats, greenish white, lay bedraggled and flattened in spots, from local wind and rain storms. Newly tasseled corn stands upright, and motionless in the evening stillness. The fields are a mass of solid shimmering green, against the eerie light.

Down the eastward valley, two hound dogs bay—furious at the growing brilliance. Others answer from north and south. Foxes, on a nearby hill, hear and appear to answer cautiously from their den. The high pitched, rapid bark betrays them well.

I have heard this same wild drama repeat itself often, under similar conditions, and wondered if bright moonlight disturbed night prowling animals, or if it merely produced a greater urge to audibly express themselves.

The whippoorwill that was silent for some weeks has found a place atop our highest hill and repeats his name with constant vigor, more than 50 times, while far across the valley on some distant knoll, his mate faintly makes reply. Far into the night, at short intervals, these birds keep up their social calls.

The big night owl adds his complaint, in no uncertain voice, until the deep woods echo and it follows low into the glen.

While my eyes are fixed upon the nearer slope, rabbits old and young go skipping along their well made trails. The moonlight is their season of fun and frolic. Damp tender clover, and crisp, moist sassafras are tonics along their paths. The lumbering opossum moves slowly through the weeds and underbush and ventures down the highway.

Strangely, the mother skunk, with her obedient young following in single file, has not come out tonight. At his burrow, high above the roadside, I see the familiar head and then the awkward flabby form of the groundhog. He is making for the patch of perennial peas at our garden's edge.

The harvest moon invites the timid, woodland dwellers to the rarest enjoyment of the summer season. At no other time is such mellow silvery light, such shifting scenery, such refreshments bathed in dew.

ERNIE PYLE Roving Reporter

Ernie Gets Right In Midst of Things By Going Ashore In Sicily at First Chance.

SOUTHERN SICILY—(By Wireless)—At the end of the first day of our invasion of Sicily we Americans looked about us with awe and unbelief and not a little alarm.

It had all been so easy it gave you a jumpy, insecure feeling of something dreadfully wrong somewhere. We had expected a terrific slaughter on the beaches and there was none. Instead of thousands of casualties along the 14-mile front of our special sector we added up a total that was astonishingly small.

By sunset of the first day the army had taken everything we had hoped to get during the first five days. Even by midafternoon the country for miles inland was so saturated with American troops and vehicles it looked like Tunisia after months of our habitation instead of a hostile land just attacked that morning. And the navy which had the job of bringing the vast invading force to Sicily was three days ahead of its schedule of unloading ships.

Convoys had started back to Africa for new loads before the first day was over. The invading fleet had escaped without losses other than normal, mechanical breakdowns. Reports from the other two sectors of the American assault front indicated they had much the same surprising welcome we got.

It was wonderful and yet it all was so illogical. Even if the Italians did want to quit why did the Germans let them? What had happened? What did the enemy have up its sleeve?

As this is written on the morning of the second day we don't yet know. Nobody is under any illusion that the battle of Sicily is over. Strong counterattacks are inevitable. Already German dive bombings are coming at the scale of two per hour but whatever happens we've got a head start that is all in our favor.

For this invasion I was accredited to the navy. I intended writing mainly about the seaborne aspect of the invasion and had not intended to go ashore at all for several days but the way things went I couldn't resist the chance to see what it was like over there on land so I hopped an assault barge and spent all the first day ashore.

WHEN we got our first look at Sicily we were all disappointed. I for one had always romanticized it in my mind as a lush green, picturesque island. I guess I must have been thinking of the Isle of Capri.

Instead, at any rate, the south coast of Sicily is a drab, light brown country. There aren't many trees. The fields of grain had been harvested and they were dry and naked and lusty. The villages are pale gray and indistinguishable at a distance from the rest of the country. Water is extremely scarce.

Good-sized hills rise a half mile or so back of the beach and on the hillsides grass fires started by the shells of our gunboats burn smokily by day and flamingly by night.

It is cooler than North Africa; in fact it would be delightful were it not for the violent wind that rises in the afternoon and blows so fiercely you can hardly talk in the open. This wind, whipping our barges about in the shallow water delayed us more than the Italian soldiers did.

THE people of Sicily on that first day seemed relieved and friendly. They seemed like people who had just been liberated rather than conquered. Prisoners came in grinning, calling greetings to their captors. Civilians on the roads and in the towns smiled and waved. Kids saluted. Many gave their version of the V sign by holding up both arms. The people told us they didn't want to fight.

Our soldiers weren't very responsive to the Sicilians' greetings. They were too busy getting all possible equipment ashore, rounding up the real enemies and establishing a foothold to indulge in the hand-waving monkey business.

After all we are still at war and these people, though absurd and pathetic, are enemies and caused us misery coming all this way to whip them.

On the whole the people were a pretty third-rate looking lot. They were poorly dressed and looked like they always had been. Most of them hadn't much expression at all and they kept getting in the way of traffic just like the Arabs.

Most of our invading soldiers, at the end of the first day in Sicily, summed up their impressions of their newly-acquired soil and its inhabitants by saying,

"Hell, this is just as bad as Africa."
